"If a man does not keep pace with his companions, perhaps it is because he hears a different drummer. Let him step to the music which he hears, however measured or far away." — Henry D. Thoreau

Individual People

*"You are tried alone; alone you pass into the desert;
alone you are sifted by the world." — F.W. Robertson*

"Whatever crushes individuality is despotism, by whatever name it may be called." — John Stuart Mill

Athletic People

Such is the constitution of man that he may be tized to win reward. Nor will any external incentives be required. Let us consider how much happiness is produced and how much misery is caused by frequent and violent agitation of the body.

It is the athletic person, usually, who likes to participate in sports. — H.C. Merckert

Nature

"Nature does nothing in vain." — Sir Thomas Browne

*"Deviation from nature is deviation from happiness." —
Dr. Johnson*

"Nature never did betray; the heart that loved her." — Wordsworth

*"Art, Glory, Freedom fail, but Nature still is fair." —
Byron*

"Nature is the art of God." — Dante

People in Pairs

"The most I can do for my friend is simply to be his friend." — Thoreau

"A pleasant companion reduces the length of the journey." — Publilius Syrus

"Two are better than one." — Ecclesiastes, iv., 9

"One's too few, three too many." — John Ray

"Nature hath fram'd strange fellows in her time." — Shakespeare

"Every man is like the company he is wont to keep." — Euripides

"Old friends are best. King James used to call for his old shoes; they were the easiest for his feet." — Selden

Studying People

"To spend too much time in studies is sloth." — Francis Bacon

"As turning of logs will make a dull fire burn, so changes of studies a dull brain." — Longfellow

"I am slow of study." — Shakespeare

Odd People

"Oddities and singularities of behavior may attend genius, but when they do, they are its misfortunes and blemishes. The man of true genius will be ashamed of them, or, at least, will never affect to be distinguished by them."
— Sir W. Temple

"All strangeness and self-particularity in our manners and conditions is to be shunned as an enemy to society and civil conversation." — Montaigne

Music People

*"Sweet compulsion
doth in music lie." —
John Milton*

*"Some to church repair, not for the doctrine, but the music
there." — Alexander
Pope*

*"Even before the music begins there is that bored look on people's faces. A polite form of self-imposed torture,
the concert." — Henry Miller*

Let's face it - Upland is not the cultural and entertainment center of the midwest. That can be good in a sense, because it makes students look to each other for fellowship and fun, etc. But on the other hand, there are times when you really need something to do. Concerts, movies, trips, etc. provide a chance for people to leave the pressures of the academic world behind them, and just be real people for a few hours.

Thium

Taylor University • Upland, Indiana 46989 • (317) 998-2751, ext 440

what do we do with our spare time? much of the time, we feel pretty guilty if we just do something fun like take in a good movie or concert, or go sledding or skiing. we often feel that we should always be studying or participating in an intellectual discussion. granted, ~~XXXX~~ these are important activities, but to be well rounded, we also need to join in non-academic things

ACTIVITIES

Autumn 1981 at Taylor University

UPPER RIGHT: Many people complained about the food at the Dining Commons, while others simply ate other things.

UPPER LEFT: Probe is an annual affair in the fall at Taylor, and group leaders need to hang together.

LOWER LEFT: Bill Westrate ponders the meaning of life and how it relates to "Philosophy and Christian Tho't."

LOWER RIGHT: President Lehman finds one of his first duties as the new Taylor leader to be a bit grueling.

UPPER LEFT: Tim and Kathy Herrmann added a third member to their family. UPPER RIGHT: It's no wonder everyone wants to go to Au Sable.

"The Au Sable field trip was a high point of my autumn. It was for Environment and Man class, it was the peak of the best colors, and was a very aesthetic and valuable experience." — Mark Olson

"Autumn is my favorite time of the year, what with the fresh, brisk air, the vibrant colors, etc." — Paul Branks

"All I know is that Spring Fever hit me immediately after the first trace of snow." — Martha Westerman

"Having the football team come within one victory of ending with a winning season was a high point for me." — Dave Calderhead

MIDDLE: Holly Egner takes her cow for a night on the town.

LOWER LEFT: The first signs of monotony set in early.

LOWER MIDDLE: Watching intramural football, or scoping?

BELOW: Dave Calderhead, lately of Van Halen fame.

Fall in Upland, IN

ABOVE: No midterms, no classes, no wonder that dog's happy. It's a good bet that the person that owns that cap isn't very pleased though.

"The song 'Start Me Up' by the Rolling Stones reminds me of fall '81 whenever I hear it." — Georgia Reasner

"This is the time period that finally saw the beginning of construction on the new Fine Arts center. Now, what about that library?" — Cindy Kelley

"I was really aware in the fall that I was starting my final year of school; I looked forward to being really involved in a lot of things, taking classes I really wanted, getting to know new people. And I knew I was doing this on a higher level of understanding than that which I had as a new student." — Vicki Cruse

"New Student Orientation was a highlight for me. There were so many new faces to meet and to make feel welcome; I enjoyed the challenge." — Peggy Blanchard

"I think of Goodwill Madness, the Flea Market Bug, and Upland Auction Fever." — Jill Meckley

MIDDLE: There are some people who can't just sleep in a simple bed.

LOWER LEFT: Did life ever feel like a track meet without a starting gun?

BELOW: Paul Hickox, probably wishing he worked for Maintenance.

ABOVE: Ken Myers speaks, later to come back in the spring as the spiritual emphasis speaker.

RIGHT: Bill Eakin, no stranger to Taylor's campus, gives a chapel presentation.

Fall Chapels Offers Diversity in Worship, Exposure to Outside Influence

"I have really been challenged by the speakers, and I have also really enjoyed the special programs that we occasionally have in chapels. I believe chapels are a refreshing and rewarding break from purely academic routines, and are a needed spiritual boost." — Marty Carney

"Chapel is one of the unique aspects of Taylor that we, as students, are lucky enough to experience. The diverse and piquant speakers add a lot to our intellectual stimulation. I think it says a lot that, even though Chapel is not required at Taylor, that most students attend the services. I believe that shows their quality." — Glenda Lehman

UPPER LEFT: Former Iranian hostage Catherine Koob gave a sobering yet touching address on her experiences in captivity.

LEFT: Singing is an integral part of most chapel services at Taylor, and is the center of some of them.

RIGHT Ron Moore, although playing to a small audience, gives everything he has to his performance on October 7 at the Chapel/Auditorium

LEFT Christopher Christenson and Aslan gave a rockin' show on September 25. A previous show several years back had made it difficult for him to return to Taylor, but he was well accepted

BOTTOM ROW: On October 24, Michael Iceberg once again brought his one-man show to Upland, giving a dazzling performance on his many organs and synthesizers, all in front of a full house

Rock and Roll, Acoustic, Electronic Music: Choose Your Favorite

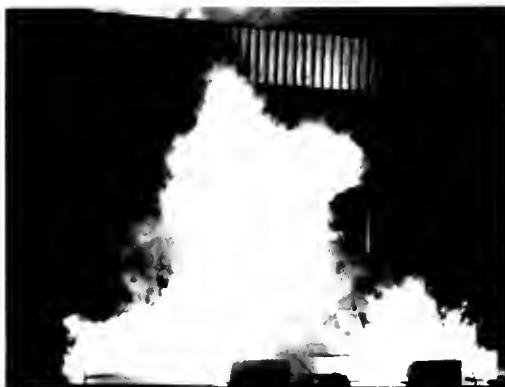

LEFT: At the Annual Fall Variety Show, Kelly Holt spent most of the evening trying to get the rhythm straight for his part in the act. Remember, "Three, by Four, Nail 'Em to the Floor!?" It seemed that the audience had it down better than Kelly did. The Show in 1981 was known for its professionalism and wide variety of acts.

BELOW: Ed DeGarmo and Dana Key and their band warmed up their guitars, keyboards, and drums, and let go for a power-packed concert that many felt defined the best that Christian rock has to offer. The sound was clean and loud, and the message of Christianity in the real world was clear.

"As the S.A.C. Concert Coordinator, I am responsible for booking bands for the whole year: we book the autumn concerts the preceding spring, and the spring concerts we book during the first two months of school in the fall. I find the most gratifying part of the job to be the chance to meet the artists, and the challenge of meeting the needs of the students." — Mike Kendall

"My favorite fall concert was DeGarmo and Key. I felt they represented good contemporary Christian music that really sounded professional. It was just plain good rock 'n' roll, not 2nd class." — Mark Burkholder

Rev. John M. Perkins on Christian Responsibility September 20-25, 1981

"I did receive some negative feedback from my messages, but I appreciate this. I like it when people check out their own opinions. I also felt a strong sense of love. Although speakers usually give in situations like this, I felt I received a lot from being here — love, encouragement, and it was also obvious that the students here are anxious to learn." — Rev. John Perkins

"The main thing I learned from him was that one needs to reach the needy physically as well as spiritually." — Beth Gabrielsen

"Rev. Perkins assumed we were the rich white who needed to go out and talk to our rich friends. His theme, I felt, was more directed towards racial and economic status aspects rather than spiritual. When I could overlook the social and racial differences, Rev. Perkins did have some ideas that made me think about my position in today's society." — David Anderson

"At first, I didn't like the speaker, but then I realized that his message was the truth that we will soon need to face up to." — John Back RIGHT: Perkins was a man that had faced many tragedies in his life, and had been to a place lower than most ever think of.

BELOW: Some found it hard to concentrate.

Ten Little Indians; When the Circus Comes to Town Welcome to the Little Theatre

LEFT: Agatha Christie's "Ten Little Indians" was directed by Doug Oliver, and was performed during Homecoming Weekend to packed audiences.

BELOW LEFT: "When the Circus Comes to Town" was an innovative experiment performed by Taylor's Oral Interpretation Class, using script collected by Director Ollie Hubbard.

BELOW: In "10 Little Indians," murders were being committed, but no one knew who the guilty party was, and as Lori Miller and Dave Shipley show here, suspicions ran high.

"I believe that one's imagination, and one's ability to channel that imagination into the creative process known as art is a primary aspect of the 'Image of God' that we human beings bear. Therefore, when one is artistic, one embodies an important aspect of God's character, and in the process God is glorified. Because of this, my experience in directing was a very memorable one."
— Doug Oliver

"In 'When the Circus Comes to Town,' poetry, songs, skits, and clowning combine to express a clown's view of what life is all about: creating laughter, spreading cheer, sharing talents, and making the most of each moment. Man's relationship to God is also examined by looking at all these values."
— Ollie Hubbard

"I guess that parent's weekend exists for three different entities: First, it's for the parents to see the school for which they are shelling out thousands of bucks to have little Junior or Susie attend. Then, it's also for the students who really miss their parents — this is a chance they have to see them without having to pay for gas to go home. And lastly, parent's weekend is for the school. I mean, if you get the parents here, they will be more apt to give their money and donations to Taylor." — Tim Cope

RIGHT: Dino Kartsonakis provided the classy entertainment on the evening of October 2. Dino is considered by many to be the top sacred pianist there is

October 2-4, 1981 — Visitation, Entertainment, and Children

"Parent's Weekend; the time when my room is clean, my posture is correct, Professor Corduan is almost formal, the football team loses by two touchdowns, my tray gets spilled while walking to the salad bar, my studies gain new and meaningful consistency, and my cheek gets pinched by people I do not know. It's a great time."
— Kevin Marshall

LEFT: Leighton Ford was the featured speaker for the weekend, talking at the Sunday morning worship service; his wife Jeanie spoke at the Saturday morning Prayer breakfast.

BELOW LEFT: The Trojan football team came through with a sparkling 24-0 victory over visiting Bluffton.

BELOW RIGHT: The Men's Chorus performed on Saturday evening, presenting a blend of serious and lighter music for parents and students.

RIGHT: Rollin Ford; a man and his parents.

"We wanted to have a scripturally based theme for Homecoming, and after a week or so of hashing around, we came up with Proverbs 3:6 — 'in all our ways.' We took it to mean the diversity here among T.U. alumni, students, and faculty. Throughout all the different fields represented, we nonetheless have one thing in common — our acknowledgment of knowing Him." — Mark Burkholder and Vicki Cruse, Homecoming co-Chairpersons

RIGHT: One of the many activities planned during the weekend was a Mexican Fiesta in the Gymnasium, complete with Mexican fun and games for all.

BELOW RIGHT: The Agatha Christie play 'Ten Little Indians' was presented at the Little Theatre both Friday and Saturday evenings.

October 16-18, 1981: A Time to Come Back A Time to Come Home

"Homecoming is a very special weekend. It brings back a lot of memories because you see some familiar faces. It's a chance for alumni and present students to unite, to become reacquainted, and become close friends again." — Cindy Burgess

LEFT: Andrus/Blackwood and Company gave the concert on the evening of October 16, combining influences of traditional black gospel and contemporary Christian music.

BELOW: The Iron Man Competition was initiated in 1981, testing the strength and endurance of contestants in events of biking and running.

RIGHT: Halloween is basically a time for good friends to get together and have a lot of fun, helping, sharing, and doing nice things for each other — just like these two guys here.

BELOW RIGHT: Too many hours, too many DC meals can do this kind of thing to a person.

Let the Weirdos Come Out, Let the Strangeness Show; It's October 31, 1981

"I like Halloween. I really do. But the trouble is with Halloween, every time that I dress up like a mummy (like I have every year since 3rd grade), the tape comes off of my ankles and trips me up right in front of the cute brunette I was intending to marry at Christmas. I wonder what her name is anyway? I see her all over the place, and it seems that no matter where we are, I manage to do something stupid like that. Back to Halloween. I have a roommate that always dresses up like J. Paul Getty. I mean who cares? I mean, what does J. Paul Getty look like anyway? Nobody knows. So, my stupid roommate has to go around every Halloween and explain what his costume represents to everyone that he sees. I can't really see the point in wearing a costume if you've got to explain it to everyone." — Kevin Manchald

LEFT: Graves should really be at least six feet deep, and the bodies should be placed in them horizontally, whether they are dead or alive.

BELOW LEFT: Georgia Reasner shows obvious signs of a split personality, yet does not seem too concerned about it. Or is she? It's hard to tell.

BELOW: Gladys Knight and the Pips decided to show up for the special music this year.

Winter in the Tundra

TOP: The snow has the ability to make the Taylor campus look like a peaceful haven in wintertime. Don't be fooled. Record low temperatures were the rule for January of 1982.

LEFT: Cars were buried in the white stuff, ditches disappeared, and bikes got a vacation.

RIGHT: Rentals of Cross-Country Skis from the Union rose dramatically with the snow.

"The fact that the Cincinnati Bengals got to the Super Bowl was not only a highlight of the winter, but of the century. The fact that they were beaten by Joe Montana's 49ers is not important." — Jeff Morton.

TOP: Driving a car was definitely not the way to travel — a good pair of skis was the best bet.

MIDDLE: This man was found frozen stiff in a snowbank, having been there from January through March.

LEFT: The first time the snow hit us, it was pretty. After about 17 blizzards, however, it became old hat.

RIGHT: There was no sense fighting the weather. Much better to take advantage of it, and get some fun out of the deal.

"Playing poker into the wee hours of the morning is a thing that sticks in my mind about the winter of '81-82. That, and the burning of the Administration Building by 3rd West Wengatz. Geez, it was cold out there." — Doug "Al Haig" Crew

"The thing I remember is something extremely rare. Taylor actually cancelled a day of classes. Yeh, just try and convince your grandchildren of that one!" — Jill Cooper

"I really don't remember much about the winter." — Doug Daniels

What Do You Do When It's -20 Degrees Outside?

TOP: Debbie Huffman finds that the Dining Commons is a good place to study, think, and talk. Now, about eating . . .

RIGHT: Being cooped up in Wengatz Hall for months on end is probably enough to drive anyone crazy, and has been known to contribute to aggressive behavior.

"I especially remember the winter of '81-'82 because I was forced to wear my ugly green boots for the first time since I broke my leg four years ago. But what choice did I have? It was so cold out that those putrid-looking things were the only shoes I had that would keep my feet warm."
— Penny Smith

TOP: Taylor basketball fans can be so polite, especially against friends like Hanover.

MIDDLE LEFT: It is hard to say what drove Mike Leburg to this state — Chem Lab, Cabin Fever, or maybe Jimmy Allan.

LEFT: Then there are those who could have it if they only wanted it.

"I was at the Urbana Conference in Illinois over Christmas break, and the snow was so heavy that the authorities had to evacuate 17,000 people from a building out of only ONE door, for they were afraid the roof was going to collapse." — Pam Miller

"I guess what I remember was going around saying "You gotta love it!" all of the time. That was our big phrase for the winter. You gotta love it." — Mike Leburg

"The big song on the radio all the time was "Centerfold" by the J. Geils Band." — Jeff Koogler

BELOW: Life in the winter is always filled with those enjoyable routines that help to make life so monotonous.

"I felt that Phil Keaggy gave a super concert. Keaggy's creativity with contemporary Christian music makes every concert he gives great." — Scott Preissler

RIGHT Russell Taft, formerly of the Imperials gave an outstanding and powerful performance with his band on December 5, 1981

BELOW LEFT Marty McCall and Fireworks came to town on February 6

BELOW RIGHT Phil Keaggy's November 4 show was packed out, and was a blend of acoustic sound and electronic power rock

Winter Concerts Provide An Escape From Inclement Upland Weather

"Russell Taft gave an excellent concert, and I especially enjoyed his rapport with the audience. His close relationship with Christ was evident through each of his songs. God has definitely given him a special talent." — Mark Allan

LEFT: Honeytree, performing at her November 20 concert, giving her version of poetic, soft, acoustic songs. A relaxing and touching evening.

BELOW: An annual favorite, the Wright Brothers, gave a show on February 26.

TOP Mrs. Claus tries to explain why Santa is late for his appearance at the annual Christmas concert. ABOVE Santa finally did appear to lead the band in a version of "Sleigh Ride." RIGHT The chorale likes to perform their songs wearing as formal attire as is possible.

The Magic Feeling of the Holidays Hits Right During Finals

"Although we are all filled with anticipation of going home, Christmas at Taylor is still a special time to show the love you have for others and it is also a time to enjoy the musical talent which is so abundant here. The frustrating part of the situation is that although Christmas should be the time of the year we are able to spend the most time with those that we love here, it is also one of the busiest times, and there are just so many things to do. It would almost seem nice to have a week after finals to just hang around here and be with friends." — Patty Hedrick

LEFT The handbell choir is a study in coordination and teamwork, resulting in beautiful tones

TOP LEFT Christmas trees were placed at numerous locations around campus in 1981, possibly to give students a feeling of home

TOP RIGHT The candlelight service has been and will be a highlight of the Christmas season for years to come

Craig Bridwell performs Rock and Roll the way it was meant to be — in its original form. Grease, shades, Fender guitars, blue jeans, these are the elements of the music celebrated at Nostalgia Night.

UPPER LEFT Who's on First? That's what I said! Scott Etchison and Jay Case perform the old Abbott and Costello routine to the cheers of the crowd

BELOW LEFT Master of Ceremonies, Giz, and Russ the Mailman entertain the crowd between acts

BELOW MIDDLE Geoff Moore and Portrait closed the show with Bill Haley and the Comet's Rock Around the Clock

Special Events

March 3, 1982, Nostalgia Night at Taylor Good Rockin'

"Nostalgia Night was one of the most exciting events of my first year at Taylor. The end of the evening resulted in an exhausted jaw from chewing gum, lips permanently dyed red, a hoarse voice weak from screaming and a head full of memories of a thrilling evening." — Priscilla Smith.

"Nostalgia Night was a night for the T.U. students to kick back, relax, and really have a fun time." — Marty Tilton

"Being on stage for Nostalgia Night helped me visualize why my parents were so excited about the '50s." — Dale Thomas

BELOW: The 1910 Fruitgum Co.

LEFT: Rick Florian as The King

Taylor Spring 1982: Cold

TOP: Cindy Burgess and Claudia Rishaw — they could be reacting to someone telling them that the weather would eventually warm up. Such a comment was hard to believe, with snow in April, and no leaves until the middle of May. RIGHT: Kim Johnson and Linda Cadman laugh at their Philosophy test scores. BELOW: Jon Baer, the lonely runner.

LEFT: The Taylor Chorale in St. Petersburg on their Spring Break tour. Florida seemed to be about the only warm place in the nation over Break, with the East and Midwest being dumped on with huge snowstorms.

MIDDLE: Mikey Burchfield and Markie Burkholder surround Jill Meckley
during a break in Nostalgia Night Festivities.

BOTTOM: Mark Youngberg pumps
iron at the first annual Power Lifting Meet at Taylor University, sponsored by the Taylor Weightlifting Club.

"The thing I remember about the Spring of 1982 is that when it FINALLY got warm out (and that was a total of about four days), I had to stay inside and work at the stinking grill — just where I wanted to be." — Scott Etchison

BELOW: Elizabeth "Lizard" McDuffie rejoices over her free refill of Coke from the Student Union Grill. This was a new policy that began during the 1981-82 school year.

"With one great big God, and lots of love, I am out to change my world. I believe that the things that really matter are a person's ability to affect other people in a one-to-one situation and to let them know of the Lord's love. The sparkle in your eyes, the way you shake someone's hand, taking time to hold a child on your lap and squeeze him until he giggles, the simple things change the world!

I would never view my books or the thousands I have addressed as a real accomplishment. If I am not genuine in my faith, if my motives are not pure, then my life is garbage and writing books and speaking means nothing." — Ann Kiemel

RIGHT: Hayman Cross brought a different perspective to an early Spring chapel as he talked about his work with inner-city blacks. Such a viewpoint is often needed in our nearly all-white middle-class environment.

LOWER LEFT: Phil Loy receives the "Professor of the Year" award at the Recognition Chapel. Loy, the head of the Political Science Department at Taylor, is known as one of the best lecturers on the faculty, bringing much insight and enthusiasm into the classroom.

LOWER RIGHT: Ralph Mattson makes a point.

Enthusiasm, Missions, Different Cultures, Awards — Chapels 1982

LEFT: Ann Kiemel brought a sense of excitement and vibrancy to her chapel audience which few speakers can match. The author spoke about our abilities and challenges as Christians to change our world in a tangible way.

BELOW: Marilyn Laszlo spoke about missions and her experiences in New Guinea, attempting to translate an unknown language.

TOP: Cecily Cardew, played by Joanne Hamm, and Gwendolen Fairfax, played by Susan Binder, decide to be coy in their attempts to win the affections of Jack Worthing (Mike Burchfield) and Algernon Moncrieff (Kurt Bullock). LEFT: Miss Prism (Barb Hauter) and Dr. Chasuble (Kirby Bradley) agree to go for a walk. ABOVE: Lady Bracknell (Laura Binder) asks Prism, "Where is that baby?"

The Importance of Being Earnest, April 27 — May 1

Inherit the Wind, February 17-20

ABOVE: The cynical reporter Hornbeck (Mark Burkholder) questions Henry Drummond (Doug Oliver).

LEFT: Rachel (Vicki Cruse) informs Cates (Mike Burchfield) that she will have to testify against him in the trial on evolution.

"In 'Inherit the Wind,' a play about the teaching of evolutionary theory in public schools, it is shown that everyone has the right to believe and think what they feel, even if it is wrong. The play showed that we are to be able to back up and have thought through what we believe." — Dr. Ollie Hubbard, Director.

"Oscar Wilde's comedy, 'The Importance of Being Earnest,' speaks eloquently of the superficiality of the Victorian society and in doing so, offers us much food for thought." — Dr. Jesse Rousselow, Director.

"The play 'Earnest' helped me to be free with my expressions. I learned a lot about letting go and expressing myself in crazy ways . . . it was a fantastic way to close the year." — Jo Hamm

"I cannot say that I was really sure who B.J. Thomas was singing for — the Lord, or his audience. I think he should have made clear to whom he was giving the glory." — Tara Davis

RIGHT B J Thomas performed at the Chapel/Auditorium on April 24, presenting a mix of his secular and Christian songs to a full house, including those attending the National Student Leadership Conference held at Taylor during this time

BELOW Phil Madeira gave his February 19 concert to a small crowd — unfortunate, for he proved to be a sensitive and entertaining man

B.J. Thomas, Phil Madeira, Douglas Wesley Haines, Tim Sheppard — Concerts, 1982

ABOVE: Douglas Wesley Haines provided an evening of acoustic, laid-back songs at his March 12 concert

LEFT: Tim Sheppard on March 17

"Although the concert only consisted of him and his piano, Tim Sheppard soon captured the attention of the audience. His music really gave glory to God and the concert was a great experience."

— Sue Fennig

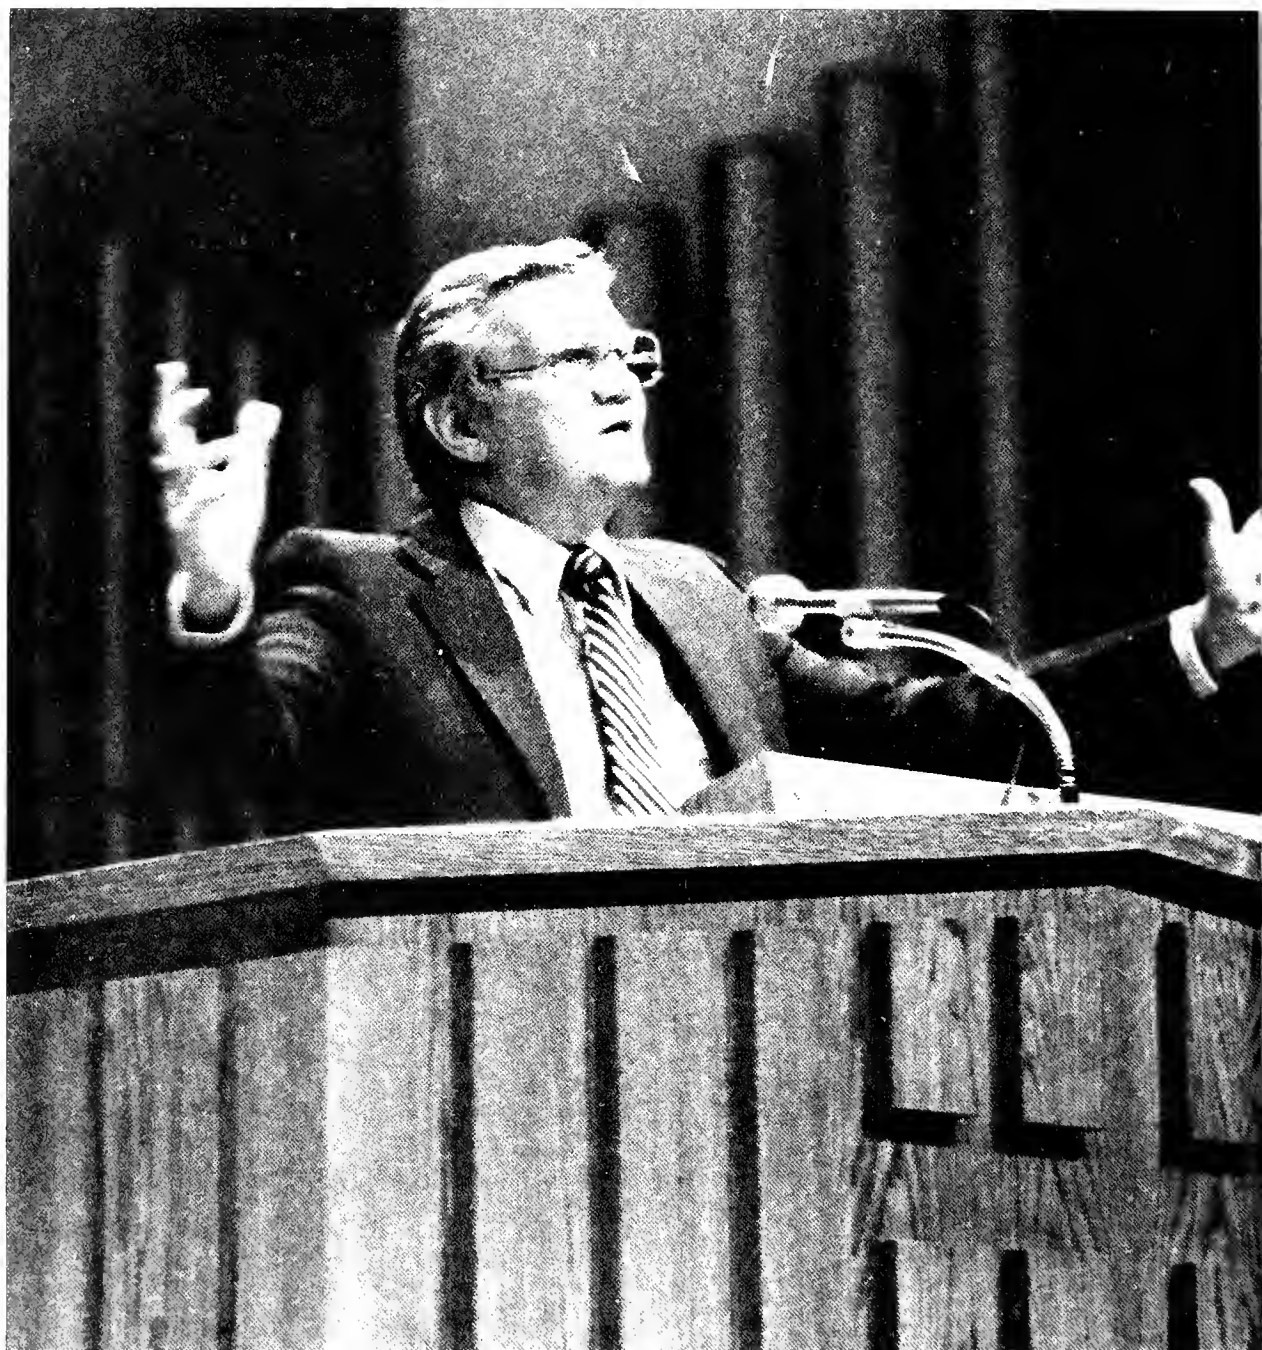

"The significance of the week was that Ken Meyer was available to the spirit of God and gave practical insights that met the needs of the Taylor family. All of this was reflected by the full house chapel attendance both mornings and evenings. The week was the result of an unusual prayer effort on the part of the Taylor community. The success of the week can be attributed to prayer." — Pastor Bob Griffin

"The speaker dealt with some confronting topics. The services were not simply comforting — they were challenging as well. We need this as a Christian community." — Jon Stocksdale

BELOW RIGHT: Meyer made many thought provoking points

Dr. Kenneth M. Meyer: Critical Questions Interfacing the Spiritual Dimension

The Lecturer

Dr. Kenneth M. Meyer has been President of Trinity Evangelical Divinity School since 1974. Immediately before coming to Trinity he was pastor of the First Evangelical Free Church, Rockford, Illinois, during which time he also served as member and chairman of Trinity's Board of Directors.

A native of Chicago, Dr. Meyer was awarded the Bachelor of Divinity from Trinity Seminary in 1956. He has done graduate work in psychology at the University of Minnesota and in 1978 was awarded the Doctor of Ministry degree from Luther Rice Seminary.

Dr. Meyer also has pastored Evangelical Free Churches in Glenview, Illinois, and Minneapolis. From 1967 to 1969 he was executive secretary of the Christian Education Department of the Evangelical Free Church of America.

Dr. Meyer is a member of the Board of Directors for the National Association of Evangelicals and also serves on its Council of Higher Education. He holds membership of Evangelical Seminary Presidents and the Evangelical Free Church Ministerial Association. He is listed in "Who's Who of the Midwest" and "Who's Who of Religion."

Dr. Meyer and his wife, Carol, have three children; two sons are serving in pastoral ministries. The Meyers live in Lincolnshire, Illinois.

"Dr. Meyer was practical, and he brought his message to our level. He used challenging ideas and gave us things that we could work out in our own lives." — Kathy Newell

"Is There a Positive View of Failure?"

Friday, 10:00 a.m.

"What Does God Expect of Me?"

"Youth Conference is an excellent chance for Taylor students to share with high school people what Christ means to them, in the environment of Taylor University." — Youth Conference Co-Chairperson Dave Shipley

"Youth Conference 1982, even though it was a lot of work in preparing for the weekend, the hard work paid off, as I saw Taylor impact on a bunch of high school students." — Mark Burkholder

RIGHT Ken Overstreet was the dynamic speaker for the conference

BELOW LEFT: Under the leadership of Overstreet, the weekend included games, discussion groups, food, and lectures.

BELOW RIGHT: Janice Handy and David Shipley served as Youth Conference Co-Chairpersons, planning all the events months in advance

More Than Conquerors — Youth Conference

March 26-28, 1982

ABOVE: It is different to see high school students taking over the Taylor campus, but Taylor students helping with the games find that regressing in maturity can be lots of fun. LEFT: Perhaps the most special aspect of the week is really getting to know the Conferees through helping them and answering their questions. BELOW: Cleanliness was stressed throughout the weekend.

The Weekend of May 1, 1982

Taylathon Festivities at Taylor U!

RIGHT: Scott Norris carries Lynn Bauer, supposedly in the fashion of the original Tarzan and Jane.

"I would like to thank all those who helped organize and support things in each area, and thank the Lord for good weather." — John Schindler

"The senior bike team was a racing machine. A great team effort and good luck gave us the win." — Tim Stevenson

RIGHT Dr George Sweeting from Moody Bible Institute was the speaker at the Baccalaureate Service in the morning.

Dorm Life At Taylor U.

LEFT: With constant difficult intellectual pursuits banging on our doors, sometimes it is actually possible to forget how to perform the simple functions of daily life. Jimmy Allan seems to have confused the purposes of his hands and feet.

BELOW: Now if you were a P.A., how would you like to walk down to your wing's lounge and have to face THIS motley crew for a wing meeting? Fourth Morris is known as a rough wing, annually losing several of its members to prison sentences, etc.

BOTTOM: One of the most relaxing aspects of dorm life is the occasional chance one has to beat a good friend over the head with any kind of hard object. Here, Doug "Falklands Crisis" Crew seems to have knocked good friend Craig Bridwell rather unconscious.

BELOW: Lynne Duckworth pretends to look forward to leaving the warmth of South Hall and face a 6,000 MPH headwind on the way to the Reade Center. Dorm rooms never seem to be the correct temperature — either you can fry an egg on your desk, or you wake up with icicles on your nose.

QUOTE

some of these people, you would swear do not exist. you can go to school here for four years and never see them once. yet, i guess they are all important. history majors never run across the experts in the biochemistry ~~CHX~~ field, and likewise, computer jocks usually aren't close friends with art profs. and some of those people in the ad building never get any publicity, tucked away in their offices. it's sad in a way, that at a small place like Taylor, we don't have contact with people in the different areas of our university.

ADMINISTRATION
FACULTY

HRS: 7:00-9:00 P.M.
MON. - THUR.

President Lehman: An Interview

ILIUM: What do you see as the major challenges facing Taylor University in the next several years?

"The major challenges would be first of all in the area of facilities. Library facilities rank as a very high priority, perhaps our number one priority, and finishing our fine arts project, as well as the possibility of incorporating a new residence hall, phasing out some of the old ones. It is basically incorporating many of the ideas we wrestled with with the faculty, students, and trustees which culminated in a long-range master facilities plan which is a ten year growth plan for the campus. Secondly, endowment is a very crucial, crucial component to our long-range stability as a Christian college. We now have a meager $2.25 million endowment and we need $40 to $50 million, and we need it within 3 to 5 years. Part of that endowment will go toward student scholarships; part of it will go toward the expenses in our general operating budget such as light, heat, etc., but endowment is really a savings account, a contingency fund for the fluctuations in the economy, and that will receive a very high priority — a priority equal to library and other buildings on campus. Finally, a spin-off of our endowment program is in the area of student financial aid. The cutbacks that we are getting from state and federal sources have to be replaced by internal aid sources, and to me, that's a positive goal, because one of the things that will do for us is it will make us totally independent of governmental red tape. To me, this is extremely important in this day and age when there are increasing amounts of strings attached to any kinds of assistance."

ILIUM: Supreme Court decisions seem to be leading toward a time when federal aid to Christian colleges may be totally cut off. Is Taylor preparing specifically for this in any way?

"Absolutely, and I would like to be as self-sufficient as we can possibly be financially within a 5 to 6 year period. I think this is important because many colleges will get caught from the standpoint that if their aid is discontinued, and they do not have any reserves to fall back on, they will be cutting faculty, staff, and they will probably be losing students."

ILIUM: What is Taylor doing to upgrade the academic standards of this institution?

"That to me is a very high priority, and I would say the thing that is the greatest challenge right now is this whole general education curriculum review that our faculty is wrestling with at the present time. What that says is simply that where we used to be on a distributed type elective-choosing system for our students, now we are having a much broader-based interdisciplinary approach to our curriculum. I think for a student who is receiving a Christian liberal arts education, that is a very important component for them to have in order to give them a world view, a world understanding of the types of things that they are going to be getting involved in. The other reason it is important is that they are going to be more sensitive to social issues, to issues of enrichment. An appreciation of the arts and different things like that, to me, is a very important component for a student beyond graduation. One of the things our faculty needs to continue to be challenged with while they are here trying to grow, and working with the students, is to be sensitive to what is happening in the marketplace. Therefore, our faculty members need to continue to attend seminars and workshops in their field, to do market research, to find out what types of things the job market is dictating, in order to actually modify our academic program, to make it more meaningful and perhaps a more salient program for the students, relevant to the '80's and '90's. What that really is, is a commitment that we have here to an applied liberal arts education."

ILIUM: There seems to be a lot of confusion among students concerning faculty tenure. Could you elaborate on the administration's position concerning tenure?

"You're kidding! I don't sense any confusion at all! Seriously, I think the confusion exists over the fact that they are seeing very popular classroom teachers that maybe are denied tenure, and some professors that have been here a number of years that are not so popular as far as their teaching methodology that have been granted tenure in years past — that is a dichotomy that raises question marks. What I am interested in doing is being very open with the faculty and student body in 1) What are our procedures for tenure, 2) What does that mean, and 3) Do we treat everybody equitably in the tenure process? But even more important, if tenure is granted, what commitment does the faculty have once tenure is attained? To continue to grow, to continue to stretch, to continue to feel challenged as they grow in their professional development. Tenure does not mean 'I have arrived.' Tenure is really a greater freedom they have to continue to excell. So what I would like to really do as I am working with the faculty personnel committee this year is to develop a new set of criteria for tenured faculty members so they know what their expectations are, to understand that student input is going to continue to be important once tenure is granted, and that they will be expected to grow and improve and enrich their own teaching after tenure is granted. And I will take it to the Board of Trustees, and then perhaps we will develop some kind of communication method so that students will know exactly what we are doing, and that will clear up a lot of confusion."

ILIUM: Is Taylor striving to become a more diversified community with respect to racial minorities?

"Yes, that is a commitment that I have — it is a commitment that is one of perhaps a multi-cultural approach. I base that on a very simplistic philosophy; at Taylor University, we are supposed to model a cross-section of America. And yet, when you look at the campus complexion, you see a lot of white faces, and you see very few minorities and even fewer international students. I am saying that if we really want to have an appreciation of world view and of what the Great Commission is all about, and if we really want to have a world view as to what it is going to be like to live in a community where there is racial diversity, then we really need to look for more minority representation on the faculty and Board of Trustees. That in itself will be the best recruiting tool that we have for minority students. Secondly, I think we need to be sensitive of when we build our scholarship fund, to actually build certain components for minority student scholarships. Those two components, to me, will do the job that we are saying that we want to do, but that is not happening very effectively right now."

Taylor's Vice-Presidents

"Gerald D. Oliver, of Altadena, California, is Taylor's new Vice-President for Advancement. Oliver has been Director of Trust Services of World Vision, Inc. From 1969-1982 he had been Consultant/President of the GOCO management and investment consulting firm in Pasadena, Calif., and primary speaker and author of a "Personal Portfolio Development" Seminar. Previously Oliver held several other positions in California — lecturer at Azusa Pacific College; Vice-President of the Auto Quip Leasing Company; President of Keeler, Neufold, and Oliver, Inc.; and Director of the Investment Division for Corporated Planning Associate, Inc. In addition, he has been employed by the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, Space Sciences Division, and has done a great deal of consulting for various business firms and educational institutions. Oliver serves as President of Castaways, Inc., Chairman of the Board for Research Associates Foundation, and Chairman of the Board for the Grandview Foundation.

The endowment program is a primary concern for Dr. Oliver as he takes over his new position. It has taken 135 years to raise the $2.3 million in funds Taylor has currently; however, Oliver's hope is to raise that figure to $30 million in his time here.

Dr. Gilbert Crouse assumed his duties as Vice-President for Business and Finance on July 1, 1981. The vacancy was created when Dr. Gregg Lehman assumed the presidency of Taylor University. He will also function as chairman of the long-range planning committee. Mr. Crouse is very qualified as his credentials show. Most recently he served as Associate Professor and Chairman of the Department of Business at Asbury College in Kentucky. Prior to that he spent a year-and-a-half as Fulbright-Hayes Professor at the National Taiwan University in Taipei, Taiwan. He also was a consultant there for the Economic Planning Council. Crouse began teaching at the University of Kentucky. He also taught at Centre College in Kentucky, the State University of New York, and Purdue University." — ECHO newspaper article

"I like to see tenure as a positive mutual relationship, responsible of being vibrant, productive and not protection; something to be appreciated, and freedom of expression by the faculty to show initiative. I hope that students take the 'Cafeteria' evaluations seriously. Those forms do have impact. Each year they can be compared to see if there is growth. They can modify what you can do and check to see if you have changed. Our question that arises about tenure is: Can someone who is tenured ever be taken off the staff? We have a program of growth. We believe that once a person is tenured, it is still his/her responsibility to be accountable in their actions. We plan to adopt the program during the next academic year." — Dr. AJ Anglin

"Mr. V. Donald Jacobsen of Greensboro, North Carolina, has been elected Chairman of the Taylor University Board of Trustees. The new Chairman is Manager, Purchasing, and Material Management for Western Electric. Jacobsen, now serving his second five-year term on the Board, has been a member of the Finance and Planning and Development Committee in the past and served on the recent Presidential Search and Screen Committee. A 1953 Taylor graduate, he has the M.S. degree in Business Administration from the Graduate School of Business, Columbia University." — ECHO News Story

"Pastor Bob Griffin is the new Director of Student Ministries at Taylor filling the position that was vacated by Pastor Hill last spring. He says, 'I am very impressed with the students, the spiritual concern and the quality of their lives. I am excited that the student body and faculty respond to exciting worship as I do.' One of Pastor Griffin's goals is to make the Sunday morning worship meaningful and creative. He plans to do that by utilizing a forum of students and professors in the various departments to add variety to the services. He also plans to work with Taylor ministerial students and possibly give them an opportunity to speak for various services.

Prior to coming to Taylor, Pastor Griffin was the associate pastor at the South Hills Community Church in San Jose, California, for one and half years. Pastor Griffin attended California State University where he received a B.A. degree. He received a Master of Religious Education from the Conservative Baptist Theological Seminary." — ECHO newspaper article

"By renovating the Student Union, we wanted to make a more conducive area for students, faculty, and staff to come and relax with friends. We hopefully made it more attractive so the Taylor community would use it more. There has already been a significant increase in the traffic through the Union." — Director of Student Programs, Lowell Iaines

Art: How would you express the essence of art?

Left: Ray Bullock
Ball State University; Ed.D.

"And I have filled him with the Spirit of God in wisdom, in understanding, in knowledge, and in gold, in silver and in bronze, and in the cutting of stones for settings, and in the carving of wood, that he may work in all kinds of craftsmanship." (Exodus 31: 3-5)

Right: Aletha Jones
Bowling Green University; M.A., M.F.A.

"— always freeing, always waiting. Prepared — when shall I confront my Images, images — secretly related. Creating or destroying, in life, in dream, in art." Ham-marskjöld

Left: Craig Moore
Ball State University; M.A.

"Go down to the shop where clay pots and jars are made and I will talk to you there. I did as he told me, and found the potter working at his wheel. But the jar that he was forming didn't turn out as he wished, so he kneaded it into a lump and started again. O Israel, can't I do to you as this potter has done to his clay? As the clay is in the potter's hand, so are you in my hand." (Jeremiah 18: 2-6)

Biology: What do you believe to be the greatest accomplishment or discovery over the past decade in the field of biology and why?

Right: Harold Z. Snyder
Michigan State University; Ph.D.

"Science advances along a broad front. All research contributes to the progress we make. No one discovery is perhaps any more significant than the other."

Ohio State University; M.S., Ph.D.

"I would have to say the development of gene splicing or recombinant DNA techniques. These techniques have enabled the biologist and others to make bacteria produce several very important substances such as insulin, growth hormone and even a facsimile of human interferon. Some have said that Biotechnology is one of the biggest industrial opportunities of the late 20th century."

Right: George W. Harrison
Michigan State University; Ph.D.

"Developments in the field of genetic engineering may have far-reaching consequences for humanity. As is true with so many discoveries and developments in the natural sciences, our ability to manipulate basic genetic processes and structures can be used for our benefit or to our detriment. Moral and ethical considerations cannot be divorced from scientific activity."

Left: Elisabeth Poe
University of Michigan; A.M.

"One of the great accomplishments in science is the research in the field of immunology. The application of this knowledge for the developments of vaccines and synthesis of interferon for the control of various diseases will aid our health programs."

Right: Paul Rothrock
Penn. State University; Ph.D.

"The greatest achievement in biology during the last decade is in the area of plant breeding. Through the new and developing techniques of synthesizing man-made genes and meristem culture it may soon be possible, despite our rapidly dwindling natural genetic resources, to quickly breed new strains of plants having higher yields, drought and salinity tolerance, insect resistance, greater nutritive value, and other special characteristics needed to meet the desperate human needs of our world."

Ohio University; Ph.D.

"The development of the field of genetic engineering probably has the greatest potential to change our lives. Decisions regarding the application of bio-technology will be among the most difficult ethical choices we will ever face."

Business: With the election of Ronald Reagan, what major economic trends for the United States do you foresee over the next several years, and why?

Right: Robert P. Benjamin
University of Michigan; M.B.A.

"I see a decrease in inflation, interest rates, federal regulations, and the welfare state. Business activity should increase causing unemployment to decrease and real personal incomes to rise."

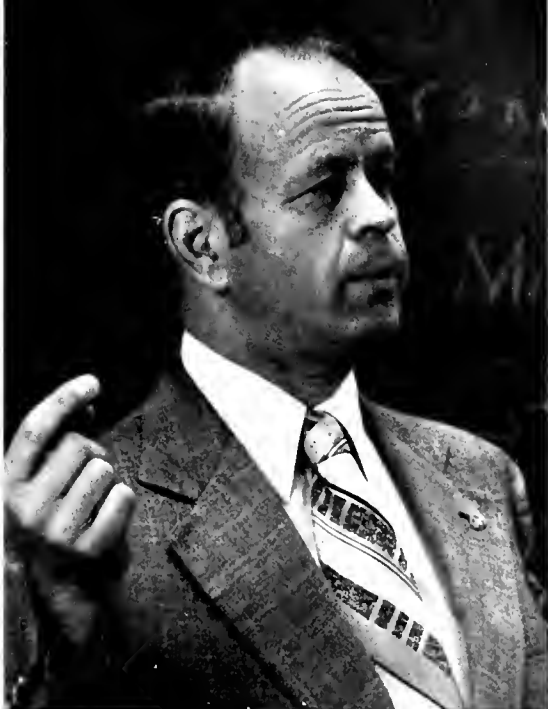

Left: Daniel B. Craig
Indiana University; M.B.A.

Right: Lee E. Erickson
University of Michigan; Ph.D.

"'Supply Side Economics' can solve both the inflation and the unemployment problems in theory. In practice, however, the 'Economic Recovery Tax Act of 1981' is not targeted toward savings and investment incentives enough to expect these results. Therefore, double digit inflation and interest rates will be with us for longer than any of us would like."

Left: Robert V. Gortner
Drexel University; M.B.A.

"With considerable waffling and weasling, I predict that the Reagan administration will succeed in reducing inflation, increasing productivity, improving our world balance of trade, and coming close to balancing the federal budget by the end of his first term. If such phenomena are possible, now is the time and Reagan is the president to do it."

Right: E. Stanley Rotruck
Indiana University; M.B.A.

"Lower interest rates, stabilization of inflation, and drop in unemployment. I also feel that the position of the American dollar will continue to increase in world markets."

Chemistry: In your opinion, what do you feel has been the greatest accomplishment or discovery in the field of chemistry over the past decade, and why?

Indiana University; Ph.D.

"I believe that the most significant accomplishments in chemistry during the last decade have been in areas related to the chemistry of genetic materials. For example, recombinant DNA research has opened up many extremely exciting possibilities for benefiting mankind. At the same time these advances portend some of the potentially most devastating and difficult decisions man has yet had to make."

Right: Daniel Hammond
Wayne State University; Ph.D.

"Since my specialization is biochemistry, I will choose an accomplishment in that field. The discovery of restriction endonucleases is of great significance because these have increased our specific understanding of the genome. These endonucleases are important in recombinant DNA research."

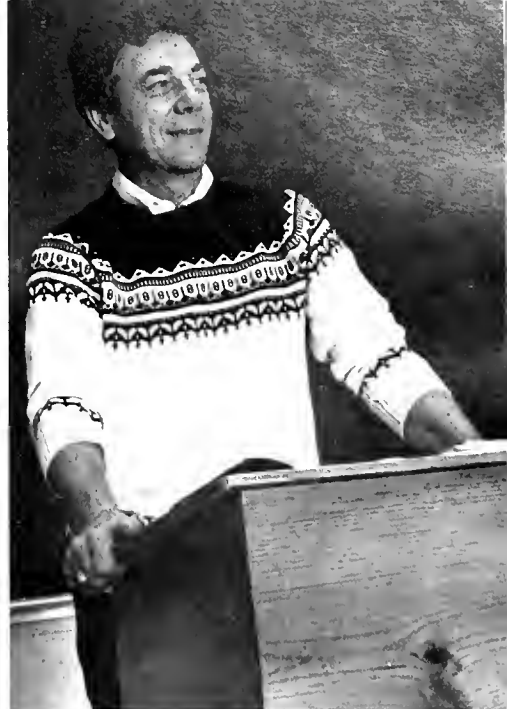

Left: LeRoy Kroll
Michigan State University; Ph.D.

"The chemistry of the other planets in our solar system. The giant-scale processes and events occurring will provide new areas of interest for many years."

CTA: Why is it important for the Christian to study communication and the theatre?

Right: Tim Kirkpatrick
Indiana University; M.S.

"... because it helps a person understand him or her self and others; this in turn sets the person free and makes it possible for him to share who he is ... and who He is."

Left: Oliver F. Hubbard, Jr.
Kent State University; Ph.D.

"To be created in the image of God implies a wide range of attributes unique to persons. Perhaps the most pervasive and encompassing attributes are those of communication and creative imagination. The ability to express ourselves by giving verbal form to an abstract idea, along with genuine emotional and physical response to real or imagined situations, and the ability to transcend ourselves through imagination and empathic involvement with others, are essential to developing our God-given potential and becoming all that He intends."

Right: Dale M. Jackson
Indiana University; Ph.D.

"In one sense, we are all students of human communication. We cannot afford not to be. Too much depends upon it, including our definition of ourselves and the world around us, success in relationships and careers, as well as the effectiveness with which we share our Christian faith."

University of Minnesota; Ph.D.

"Participation in theatre provides a uniquely powerful way to explore the nature of our human experience in this space time reality. It can also lead to new insights into the transcendent dimensions of life and living. Thus, theatre enables us to reconcile the disparities we all feel between the finite and the infinite, the physical and the spiritual, the time bound and the eternal."

Education: How do you feel that declining enrollment will affect the quality of education in general over the next several years?

Right: Joe Burnworth
Ball State University; Ed.D.

"Declining enrollment will not affect the quality of education if Proverbs 16:3 remains a constant guidepost for T.U. We cannot compromise standards of Biblical truth."

University of Kentucky; Ed.D.

"Since schools will need fewer teachers, there can be the selectivity which results in the employment of only those teachers who are growing professionals combining academic strength with skill in methodology and discipline and evidencing genuine interest in those whom they teach. If quality teachers teach smaller classes, undoubtedly quality education will result."

Right: Robert J. Freese
Xavier University; M.Ed.

Left: David D. Hess
Ball State University; M.A.Ed.

"The decline in enrollment will not affect the quality of education, nevertheless, there will be improvement because of other factors such as technology, teacher training and public demand."

Right: M. Jane Hodson
University of Cincinnati; M.S.

"The impact that we would experience would result in less monies for the operation of all our academic programs. I feel it is a MUST that we keep our Christian standards high in order to draw Christian students to Taylor."

Left: Daniel Jeran
University of Nebraska; Ed.D.

"Fewer students would definitely affect the quality of education. At the college level quality education is usually measured in terms of outstanding faculty; generous selection of courses in the major field; stimulating curriculum; spacious, clean and new facilities and well kept buildings and grounds. Since our primary source of revenue is based upon the tuition dollar, declining enrollment would most certainly alter many of the educational benefits which we now enjoy."

Right: Helen E. Rogers
Ball State University; M.A.

"I feel the quality of education at Taylor University will not be affected by the possibility of declining enrollment. The smaller enrollment may cause a tightening of the number of faculty involved in the disciplines, but all levels of education would continue at maximum quality."

Left: Carl W. Rice
Ball State University; Ed.D.

"It will have little or no effect. Historically, students enter college for advanced skills. The declining enrollment may well increase the quality of our products."

English: In an age of ever increasing technology, why do you feel that it is still important to study English?

Right: Marilyn A. Walker
Indiana University; M.A.

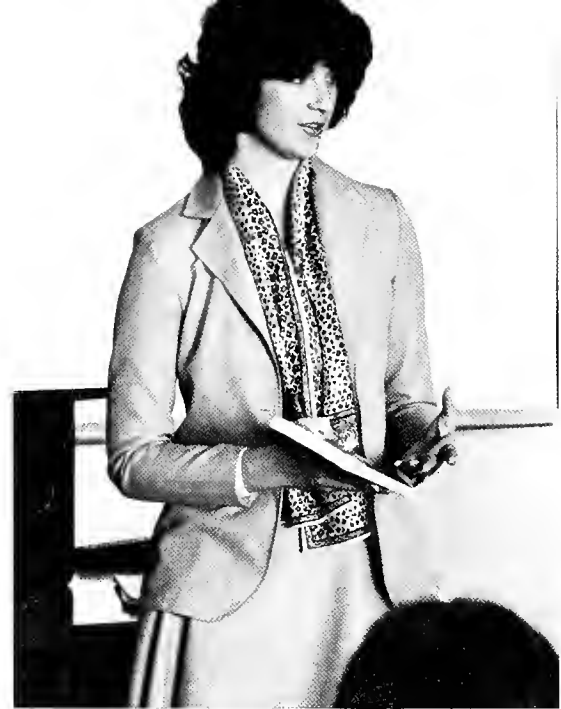

Left: Beulah P. Baker
Michigan State University; Ph.D.

"Literature reminds us of what makes us human, and teaches us how to communicate more effectively. The timeless concerns of man tend not to change, no matter how they alter in form."

Right: Tara E. Davis
Ball State University; Ed.D.

"As increasing technology provides greater opportunities for global interaction, precise and sensitive communication in major languages such as English is critical."

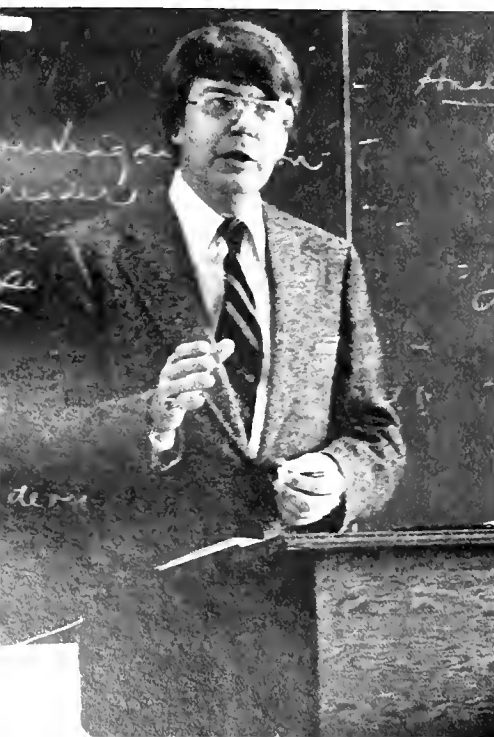

Left: Edward E. Dinse
University of Wisconsin — Milwaukee; M.A.

"Technology tells us what is practical to do and gives us tools with which to accomplish our tasks efficiently, but it falls short in telling us what the less tangible and more spiritual consequences of our actions are. The study of the English language provides us not only the most basic tools we have for communicating with and thereby understanding each other, but also insights through dialect, idiom, and convention into the way varied groups of people think and what they believe. The study of literature helps us to understand at the deepest levels the consequences of belief and action upon the total beings of humans, including ourselves."

Right: Frances W. Ewbank
University of Colorado; Ph.D.

"John Ruskin said, 'You must either make a tool of the creature or a man of him.' Contemplation of the GREAT literature of the world reminds man that he was 'created a little lower than the angels' and that it is his duty as well as great privilege 'to make reason and the will of God prevail.' (Matthew Arnold)."

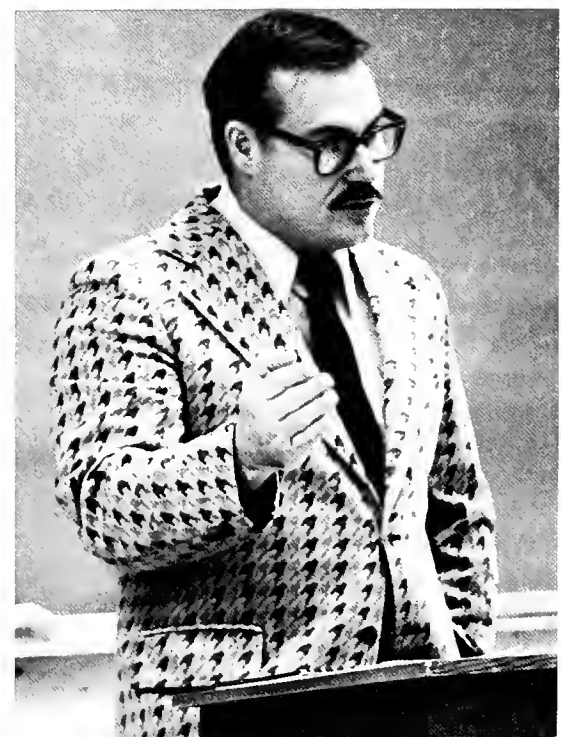

Left: William A. Fry
Columbia University; Ph.D.

"Language will always be the key to significant human experience. To the extent we are proficient in the use of our own language we will participate more meaningfully and productively in our world. Mathematics is the language of technology; but try explaining mathematics without English!"

Right: Kenneth D. Swan
Ball State University; Ed.D.

"Language was, is, and will continue to be far into the future man's basic medium of communication. Technology will never replace language because language is indispensable for human thought, and technology is a product of human thought."

History: What is, in your opinion, the value of studying man's past?

Michigan State University; Ph.D.

"Great personal enrichment is derived from knowledge of our human past — the thoughtful relationships by which men faced their tasks, or their dilemmas, and left us considered examples of how, or how not, to think or act."

Right: Roger Jenkinson
Oklahoma State Univ.; Ed.D.

Left: Dwight L. Mikkelsen
University of Kentucky; Ph.D.

"This is the only way to understand and appreciate the values of those who lived before us and apply them to our daily decisions."

Right: William C. Ringenberg
Michigan State University; Ph.D.

"If God's purposes for mankind are timeless, and if the results of obedience and disobedience to his will are the same in the past as in the present, then should we not seek to learn from the past in order to live in the present with wisdom and to ponder the future with confidence?"

Below Left: Alan H. Winquist
New York University; Ph.D.

"In order to give an adequate answer why one should study the human past, it is useful to ponder the thoughts of three outstanding men who have gone before us. Cicero, the ancient Roman statesman, orator, and author, put it this way: 'To be ignorant of what happened before you were born is to be ever a child.' One of George Santayana's memorable quotes is: 'Those who cannot remember the past are condemned to repeat it.' Finally, F.W. Maitland, the British historian, summed it up this way: 'We study the day before yesterday, in order that yesterday may not paralyse today, and today may not paralyse tomorrow.' This is the challenge of history."

Information Science: To what extent do you feel that the increased use of computers will eliminate the human element in the working situation?

Right: H. Leon Adkison
Texas Christian University; Ph.D.

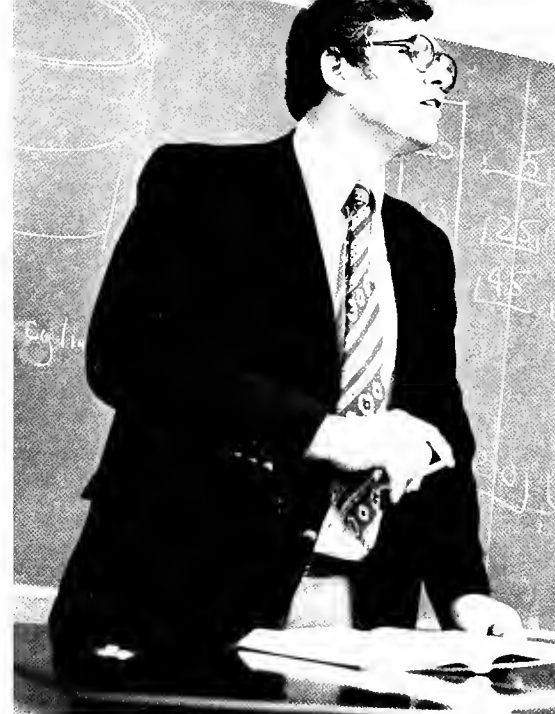

Left: Tim Diller
University of California at Los Angeles; Ph.D.

"As computers become more widely understood and employed, their increased use will allow men and women to exercise their unique creative capabilities. Computers are powerful tools for freeing workers from drudgery and will thus enable people to amplify their contribution to society."

Right: R. Waldo Roth
Ball State University; M.A.

"There is no question that computer technology is causing and will continue to cause significant dislocation in our society. However, some of the jobs being eliminated or modified should be as they have been demeaning and not contributing to the individual's self-worth. It is our responsibility as concerned Christians to help find more meaningful and contributory work experiences for individuals in our society. This is one of our major challenges in the 1980s."

Math: What do you believe to be the most important trend in the field of mathematics in the last fifty years?

Ball State University; M.A.Ed.

"The most important trend in mathematics is the electronic revolution. We now find ourselves spending seven years teaching youngsters how to find facts that an $8 gadget gives us in a twinkling of an eye by merely pressing buttons! So we now have the exciting prospect of making mathematics a real thinking and problem-solving endeavor without our getting bogged down in a morass of boring mechanical computations on paper."

Right: Paul M. Harms
University of Missouri at Rolla; Ph.D.

"One main trend has been in the area of foundations of mathematics where questions have been raised about mathematical systems and the nature of mathematical entities. The other trend is the growing use of mathematical models outside the physical sciences."

Florida State University; Ph.D.

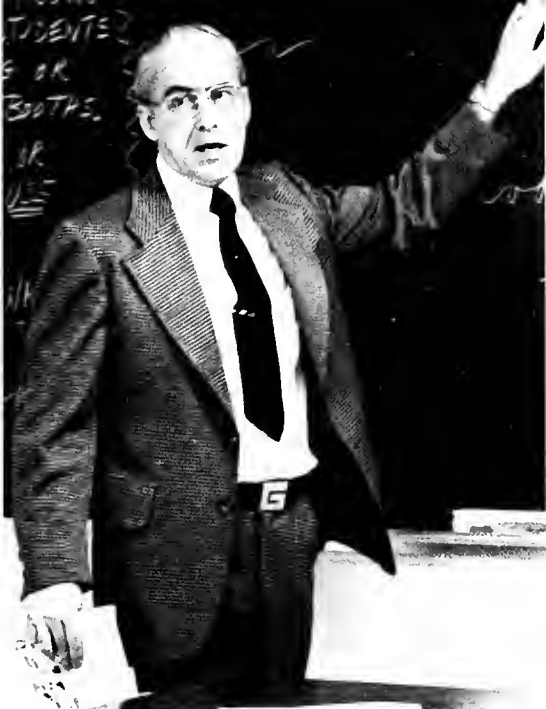

"In the 20th century, mathematics has become more abstract and more theoretical. In the last two decades there has been more of an emphasis on applications. These two trends may seem paradoxical; but actually, it is only as theory is developed that applications of that theory can be made."

Right: Dale E. Wenger
Ohio University; M.S.

"The scope of statistics and the need to study statistics have grown considerably in the last few decades. The main reason for this growth is the increasing quantitative approach employed in all the sciences, as well as in business and in many other activities which directly affect our lives."

Modern Language: Do you feel that there has been enough emphasis placed on foreign language study in our nation?

Left: Carl E. Gongwer
Indiana University; M.A.

"Yes and no. It depends which kind of emphasis and which languages a person is talking about."

Right: Philip B. Jones
Catholic University; Ph.D.

"No. Not only has the American education system as a whole but those of the university in particular fallen far short of what should have been done or should be done in foreign languages. 'No country is an island' separated to its own self. OPEC, Cancun, the Common Market, Japan and Red China all have something to teach us about our need for others. If we are to deal with others we must know how they think and every one thinks in his own language."

Left: Janet C. Loy
Indiana University; M.A.T.

"Americans, traditionally very pragmatic, have seen little reason to study a foreign language. Those who have been attracted to language study have either had quite specific career goals in mind or have appreciated its intrinsic benefits. We now find that people are just beginning to listen to the cries from various quarters that knowledge of only English is not enough and that fluency in another language can be useful in the job market."

Music: For centuries, serious music was dominated by Christian influence. Why did this cease, and do you foresee any return to a state of great Christian influence — why or why not?

Right: Barbara C. Dickey
Indiana University; D.M.E.

"That depends upon what you mean by 'Christian influence.' Music expressly written for worship? Music composed by Christians? Ultimately, neither makes much difference, though. All GOOD music is God's gift to us through the avenue of his gifted creatures."

University of Illinois; M.S.

"In a world headed philosophically in the direction of Secular Humanism, I do not foresee very much impact of Christian influence in the arts. As a matter of fact, Christians need to be very careful about the influence of secular humanism in our churches and schools especially through the medium of 'Christian' rock music."

Right: Philip Kroeker; Indiana Univ.; Ph.D.

"Artistry is gifted work. It is man responding to God's command to cultivate the earth. As Christians apply themselves to serious study and diligent work, resisting the superficial and the simple call to the pragmatic, they will exert a positive influence in serious art."

Ohio State University; Ph.D.

"Music and talent are gifts of God. Man's acceptance of and usage of these gifts has been influenced more and more by worldly values. If and when man redirects his efforts toward a Christ-centered life (as opposed to a self-centered and materialistic orientation), commensurate with Biblical considerations and principles."

Right: Timothy W. Sharp
Southern Baptist Theological Seminary;
Ph.D.

"Throughout history, 'Christian influence' upon art has been determined on the large scale by governmental demands for 'Christian' art. Since the age and person of Beethoven, the individual spirit has been allowed to break away from patrons, government mandates, and religious demands. 'Christian influence' upon art will return on the surface level only if governments demand such productivity, or if there is a tremendous religious awakening; however, there are some of us who believe that serious music in itself is now and always has been a source of God's revelation, therefore creating the presence even now of a 'Christian influence' upon serious music."

University of Washington; D.M.A.

"Serious music has never been dominated by Christian influence, at least not in the Evangelical sense of the term 'Christian.' The institutional church dominated the arts as a result of the political and economic power of the ecclesiastical hierarchy until about the eighteenth century. I see no return to this situation in the foreseeable future because of the relatively minor role played by the Christian church in contemporary society, particularly in the arts."

Right: Ronald Sloan
University of Arizona; Ph.D.

"Serious music is still dominated by the Christian ideals of diversity within unity. However, it is true that the evangelical community is no longer interested in serious music. Evangelicals view it as too intellectual for use in worship or evangelism."

Below Left: Hilda L. Steyer
Cincinnati Conservatory of Music; B.Mus.

"Music has always reflected the age in which it was written — the social, political, and cultural evolve around the same focal point. In the early periods the church became of foremost importance; consequently, church music was provided by the eminent composers. I do not see good serious music of the future returning to the church because: 1) We already have a wealth of good sacred music, 2) Music will continue to reflect the age as previously stated; hence, the restless, discordant, experimental, electronic and even synthetic 'music' of the twentieth century."

Physical Ed.: With the increased emphasis on jogging or other physical activities over the last decade, do you see a noticeable improvement in the health of the general population?

Right: Joe Romine, Ball State University;
M.A.

Left: Richard W. Gates
University of Buffalo; Ed.M.

"I would say yes — but not only as a result of physical activities. The 'health awareness' factor cannot be overlooked — such things as preventive medicine, dieting interest, etc."

Right: George A. Glass
Ball State University; M.A.

"I have viewed a noticeable change (positive) in the attitude and approach taken toward all types of fitness exercises. Not only have the raw numbers increased on campus of persons exercising, but the quality of the various exercises have greatly improved."

Left: Sue Ann Herbster
George Williams College; M.A.

"The increased emphasis on fitness, in recent years, has promoted additional attention to our physical status. Although the American public is headed in a positive direction, it will be several years before we, as a population, begin to reap the benefits of a physically fit society!"

Right: Diana L. Jones
Bob Jones University; M.Ed.

"It is difficult to say that there has been a noticeable improvement in the health of the general population. In my own mind I would think 'yes.' More and more individuals are involved in a scheduled exercise program and thereby, improving their health."

Central Missouri State; M.S.E.

"The jogging craze has led to an increased interest in personal fitness in our nation. As an off-shoot people have turned to activities such as cycling, racquetball, tennis, swimming, etc., as ways of maintaining cardiovascular fitness. Recent statistics show a marked decline in heart disease in the U.S. during the '70s."

Samuel W. Sample
Kearney State College, M.S.

"Jogging has definitely helped the overall health of the general population — for example, I am no longer scared of dogs after being chased 500 times and only being bitten 5 times."

Taylor University; B.S.

"Personally I haven't noticed any appreciable improvement in the general health of people. But, I do feel more and more individuals have become aware of the values of exercise in improving their physical as well as mental state of health and have taken to streets or courts in an effort to enhance their self-perception."

Right: Ruth Warner
Taylor University; B.S.

"I see a noticeable improvement in the CONCERN for our general health which is really exciting. Being a positive person I like to believe that people are exercising more regularly and are becoming healthier."

Left: Larry C. Winterholter
Illinois State University; M.S.

"A recent article in the Marion Chronicle quoted a spokesman from the American Heart Association, who indicated heart related deaths during the decade of the 70s had been reduced by 25%. Although increased exercise levels cannot singularly take credit for such a statistic, it would be unrealistic not to recognize that exercise has made a great contribution to such progress. Keep running!"

Physics: In your opinion, is there a sound basis for the controversy over whether nuclear power is a safe and economical energy alternative?

Right: Roger W. Roth
Cornell University; M.S.

Left: Elmer N. Nussbaum
University of Rochester; Ph.D.

"There are substantial arguments both for and against the advantages of nuclear power. The emotional climate in which the discussions often take place is unfortunate, however, and probably arises in part from the understandable fear of nuclear weapons. But reactors and weapons are really very different."

Right: Robert C. Wolfe
Indiana University; M.A.

"Certainly there IS a basis for controversy — disagreements arising largely from personal bias and differing interpretations of benefit versus risk. Nuclear technology provides valuable, but costly energy (more costly than once envisioned, partly because of stringent licensing requirements) with minimal probability of a disastrous accident — but with the possibility of catastrophe if such an accident should occur."

Political Science: In the future, do you see an increase in the polarization of nations under the American and Soviet camps, or do you feel that the two superpowers' influence will decline, and why?

Princeton University; Ph.D.

"While Soviet and American influence will remain formidable for many years, the combination of their respective economic difficulties and the preoccupation of individual nations with their own development means that East-West polarization of the world will continue to decrease."

Upper Right: R. Philip Loy
Indiana University; M.A.

"There will be decreasing polarization. Pressures within the economies of Soviet bloc countries point that direction as do the economics of oil point to greater differences within NATO and among U.S. Asian allies. In the years ahead, fewer and fewer countries will consciously identify with either of the great powers, but rather will pursue politics relevant to their own immediate interests."

Psychology: What do you see as the greatest advancement in the field of psychology over the last 20 years?

"Psychology has become a more person-oriented field in the last twenty years. The radical behaviorism of early psychology now sees competition with cognitive and humanistic psychologies. For this reason there has also been a growing interest in integration of the Christian world view with psychology over the last ten years."

Middle Right: Joe W. Lund
Ball State University; M.A.

"Psychology has come to the realization that the scientific study of man does not have to occur in a laboratory in order to remain scientific, i.e., valid. As a matter of fact, the more natural the setting, while still maintaining needed controls, the better."

Left: Vance Maloney; Ball State Univ.; M.A.

"That Christians are seeing the need for the integration of Theology and Psychology. Christians are seeing that the Bible has most of the answers which psychology has been looking for in regards to man's nature and his needs."

Right: Allen D. Meyer; Indiana Univ.; Ph.D.

"The greatest 'advancement' in psychology has been the recognition that psychology fails to conclusively answer basic human questions, thus encouraging their examination from a biblical point of view."

University of Texas, Ph.D.

"I believe the greatest advancement in the field has been the integration of psychology with a Christian perspective. This integration is evidenced by increased research and literature with an openly Christian orientation, and by the development of graduate level programs for Christian counselors."

Religion: What do you see as the biggest issue facing the evangelical Christian church in the next decade?

Upper Right: Fred H. Luthy
Southern Baptist Theological Seminary;
M.R.E.

Rice University; Ph.D.

"One of our biggest challenges will be to retain the unity we should have in view of our great diversity in social and practical approaches. We must learn to work with each other on the basis of what we share in common: salvation by grace through faith in Jesus Christ and the authority of the Bible."

Right: Charles R. Wilson
Vanderbilt University; Ph.D.

"The authority of the Bible is the biggest issue. My response is based on the acute awareness of many that there is a major crisis revolving around the matter of HOW authoritative is the Bible and what gives it its authority."

Religion: Do you feel the fundamentalist element of the evangelical church is, as a whole, emphasizing the right issues, and why or why not?

Fuller Theological Seminary; Ph.D.

"I would say that they are emphasizing SOME of the right issues, such as abortion, pornography, and homosexuality, however, they are generally silent with respect to the problems of the poor, world hunger, racism, environmental ethics, and nuclear proliferation."

Right: E. Herbert Nygren
New York University; Ph.D.

Left: Sigurd H. Zielke
Fuller Theological Seminary; Ph.D.

Sociology: In your opinion, is it our responsibility as a rich so-called Christian nation to give direct economic aid to starving third world nations, and why or why not?

Right: Marilyn F. McQueen
Indiana University; M.S.W.

"'As oft as ye have done it unto the least of these . . . ' Many times Christ speaks of our responsibility to the poor. I believe the church and government must respond to world hunger. Individuals — men, women, and children — should not be allowed to starve or die because government ideologies are in conflict. That is like 'Blaming the Victim' for a situation they did not personally create. The need is painfully simple. The solution, to be more than temporary, is complex. It's ecological, systemic, very personal, and by all means spiritual."

Ph.D.

"'Some yes, however, as an old Indian saying goes, 'Give a man a fish and you feed him one day, but teach him to fish and you feed him for life.' By this, I mean help them develop their own technology so they can feed themselves.'"

Right: John W. Wallace
University of Pittsburgh; M.S.W.

"'Jesus preached the gospel to the poor but He was also concerned about their physical problems. The blind were made to see, the lame were healed, the deaf were made to hear, the lepers were cleansed, evil spirits were commanded to come out and even the dead were raised to life. Jesus hated evil tremendously because He loved the people whom the evil was ruining. Should we do anything less than He?'"

Left: Daniel Yutzy
Ohio State University; Ph.D.

"'Yes it is our responsibility to give aid to starving third world nations. Purely selfish interests should motivate us to this since such aid will inevitably rebound to our benefit. However, we must also recognize that we are part of a global society and that whatever happens in the Sahel region, etc., will effect our own ability to live healthy and satisfying lives. Finally, and foremost for us as Christians, we are called to a life of demonstrating the love of Christ in all that we do. Lazarus, with his poverty and sores has indeed been cast upon our porch!'"

Men's Intramurals — Amateurs in Action

"I really feel that my team — Third Center — was one of the best tempered teams that played intramurals. I think that playing together built a lot of unity which was something we lacked in other areas of our dorm life." — Paul Rogers

RIGHT: Paul Branks exemplifies the action which is so typical of men's intramural football. High School jocks who have decided to not participate in varsity sports in college love the chance to get out and compete in intramural football, soccer, basketball, wrestling, track, softball, etc.

BELOW LEFT: Intramural softball is a sure sign of spring, but often the fields are more soggy than the players would like them to be.

ABOVE: Wrestling can often be a bit rough, for it is a sport requiring a complete knowledge of the rules — something which is often lacking in intramural competitors.

"I feel that intramurals are a good outlet for frustrations and from studies. It is also a great chance to get to know other people who we would normally not get the chance to meet otherwise." — John Edwards

LEFT: Jim Horn, referee for a basketball game finds that he is not a popular man at the moment — a fate common to all refs.

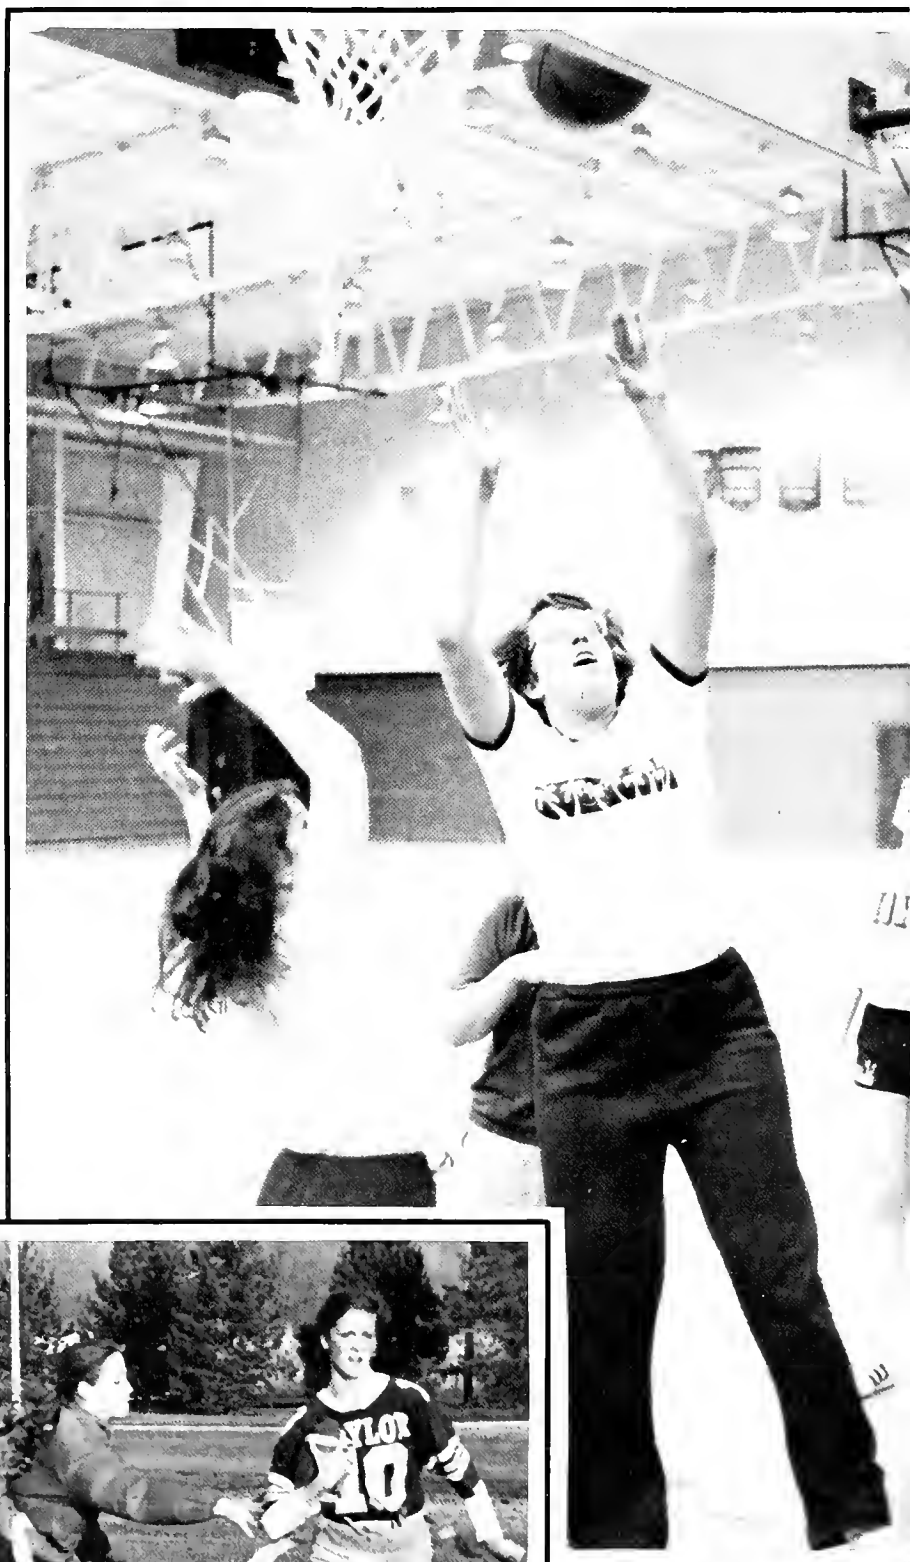

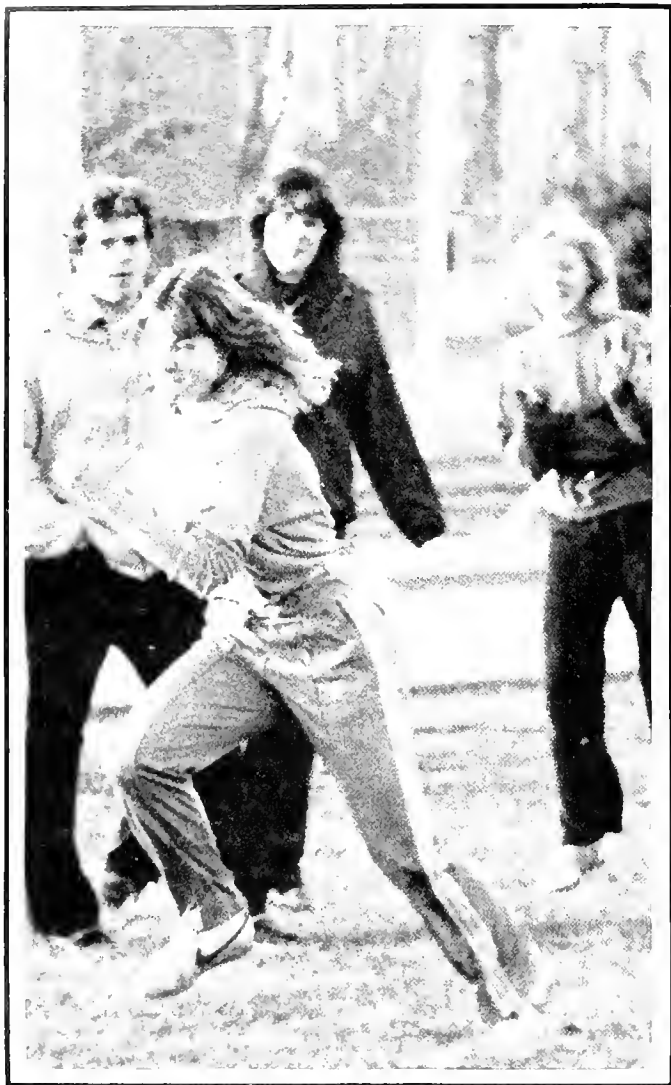

BELOW LEFT: Basketball perhaps brings out the competitive spirit more than any other sport, and this can cause conflicts.

Women's Intramurals at Taylor

BELOW: Intramural football gives women the chance to get out and show their abilities on the gridiron.

ABOVE: Basketball gives ladies the chance to show that they were stars in high school and could have been in college.

TOP: Although not having had the chance to play varsity football in high school, the women are still able to come up with complex plays, including motion and shotgun quarterbacks.

"Intramurals was an enjoyable time to come in fellowship with people from the wing that you usually don't get to see often. A good time for encouragement from each other." — Allyson Baudendistel

"I really enjoyed getting together with the other girls. It was competitive yet wasn't as demanding as a Physical Education class." — Mary Moore

Men's Tennis Team Goes Undefeated

Take NAIA Championship

"It was really a fun season. Throughout the year, the guys played extremely well. We found because of our record, that the other teams really wanted to beat us and were always well-prepared to meet us. So, even though we ended up the season undefeated, the guys had to work very hard for their success, and this is a real compliment to their characters. A fantastic year." — Coach Larry Winterholter

"I'm sure that we have support out there in the form of fans, but people don't know about our matches, so they end up not coming." — Charlie Payne

"It was easy as a team member to tell that Coach Winterholter really cared about us, and that he put a lot of work into the team. I have to give him credit for having the guts to take on the time-consuming, rather thankless job." — Mark Levesque

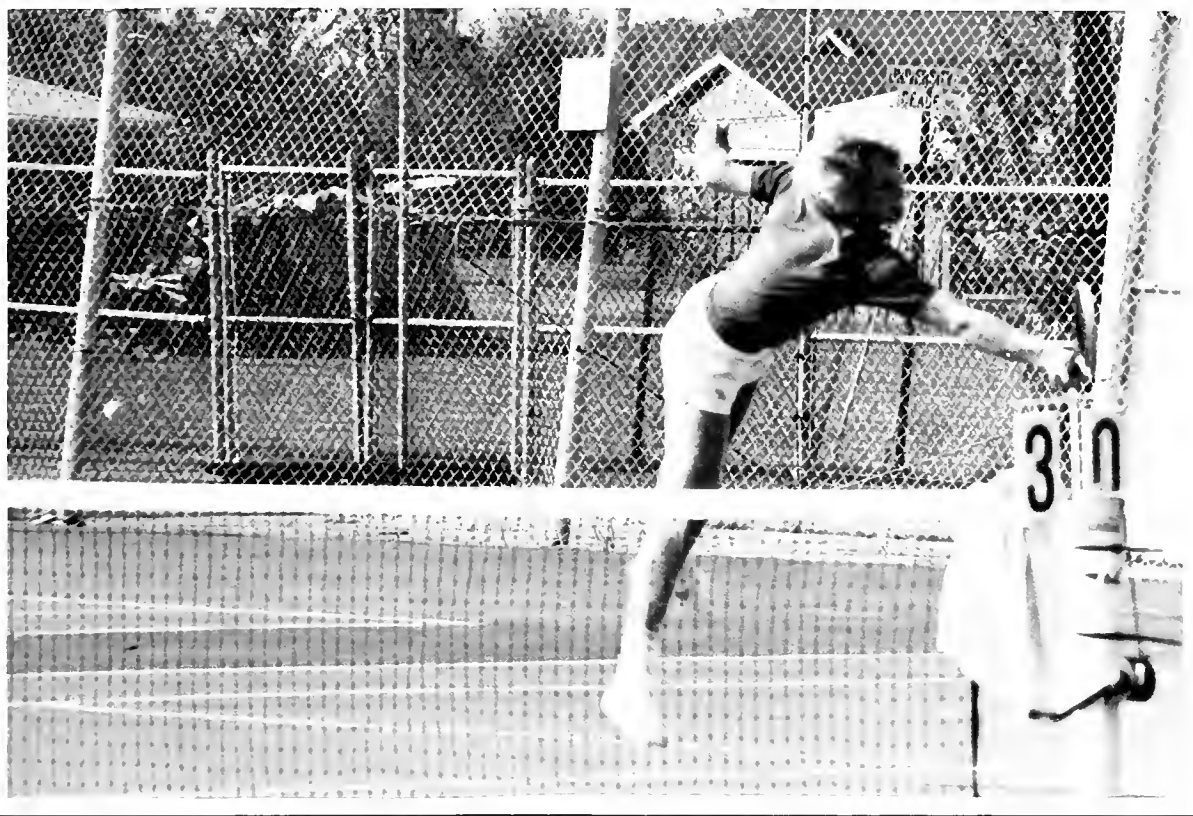

ABOVE RIGHT: Buster Behr, on a service, displays the large amount of concentration that is necessary in the game of tennis.

LEFT: Dave Anderson, showing the mobility needed to be able to stop on a dime and change directions.
RIGHT: John Rexroth grimaces as he returns one, exhibiting the strength used in tennis, which is often considered a less-than-masculine sport.

Women's Tennis Faces Tough Competition

"Compared to last year's team, we did a lot better this year due mainly to more experienced players. I would call that — experience — our most improved factor over last year." — Lyn Sheply

"I really enjoyed playing with the other girls on the team this year." — Ruth Heidtman

LEFT: Karen Wittig uses her forehand. The women's team, coming off of a disastrous year last year, and not having an experienced coach, still managed to climb to competitiveness.

RIGHT: Most Valuable Player Carol DeHaan keeps her eyes on the tennis ball.

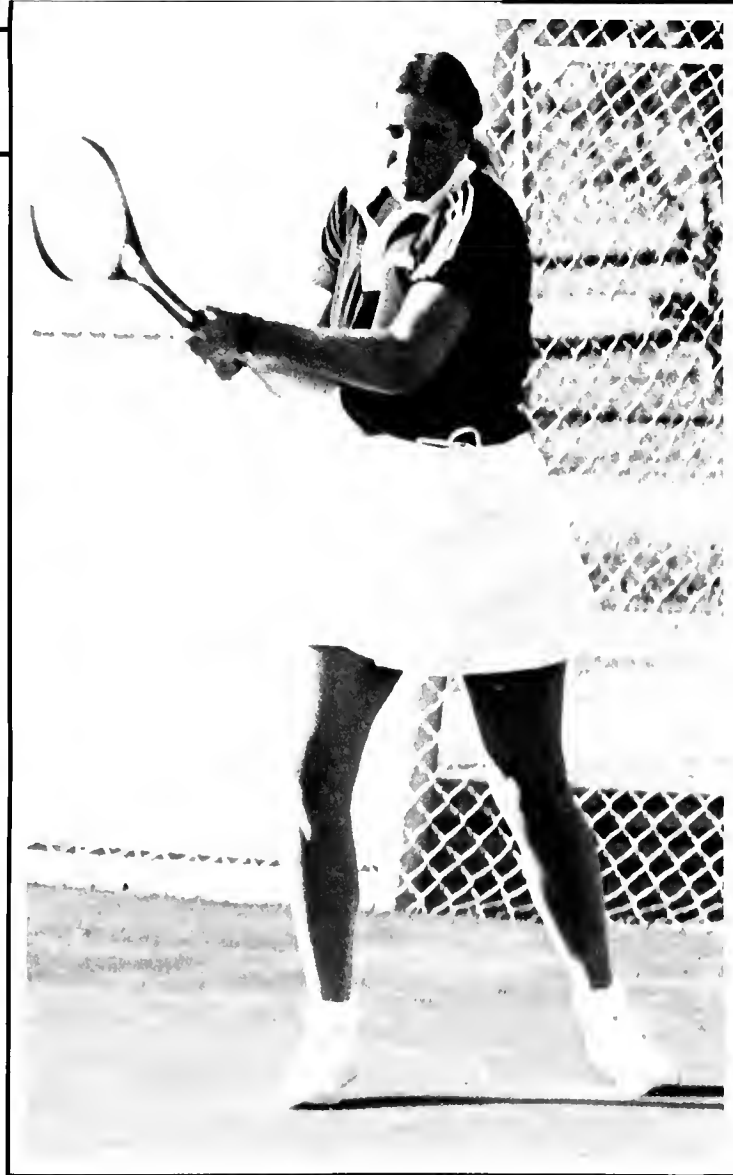

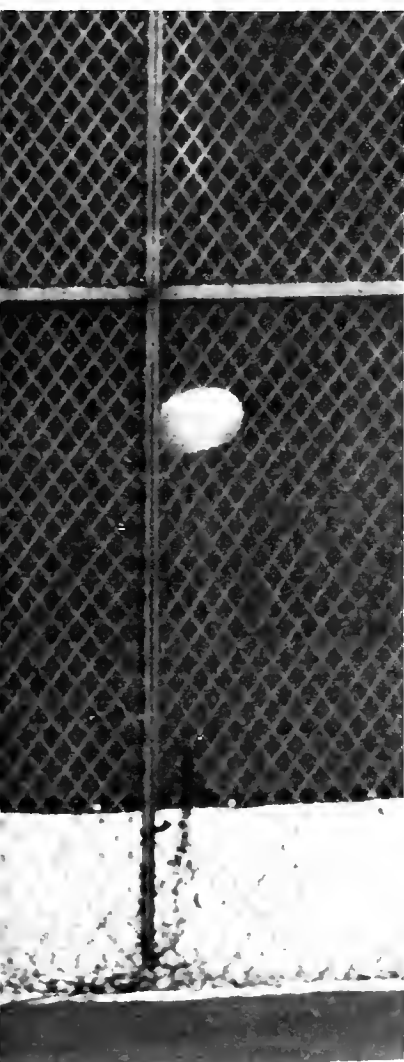

"I feel that our schedule was the most important factor for our team this year. We were playing Big 10 teams with scholarships, etc. We did manage to play fairly consistently; in fact, we found that the girls would actually play better against the bigger schools." — Coach Ruth Warner

ABOVE: Lori Yeager uses a two-fisted approach to a return shot. With experience under their belts, the tennis team looks to improve their record even more for the 1982 season.

Field Hockey Team Gains Experience

"Our problem was that we lost six of our best players from last year, and we got eight new ones that had never played the game before. So, naturally, it was a learning season and we had successful growth in the areas of skill development and in setting goals. Our first goal was to feel like winning." — Coach Diana Jones

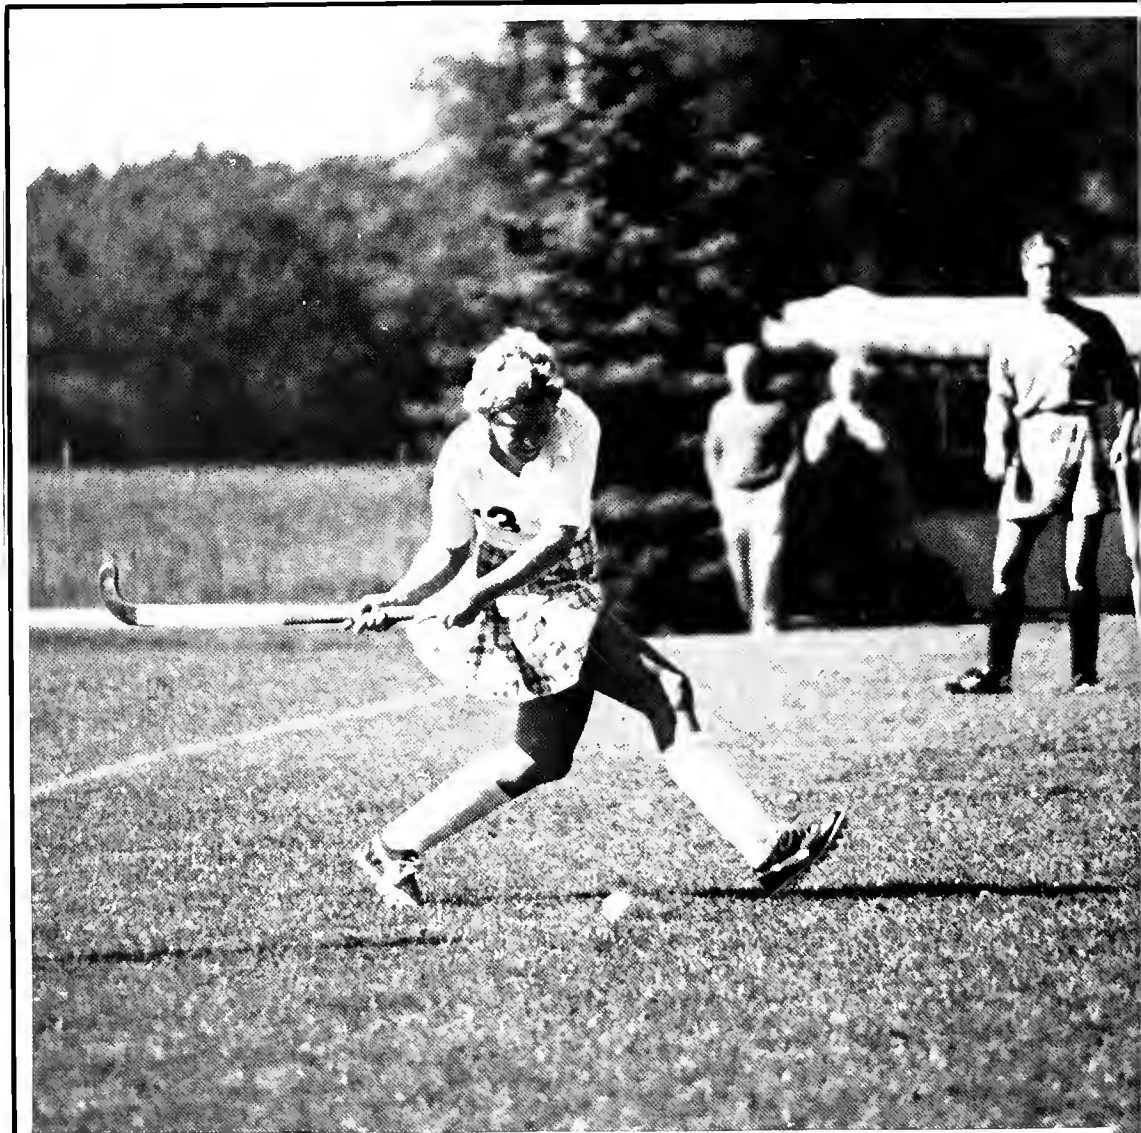

"Having so many inexperienced people on the team was frustrating for those of us who had played before, but the great enthusiasm from the new players helped us get through the seasons low points." — Vicki Pierce

"It was certainly a frustrating season record-wise, but the valuable part was the closeness of the girls. Our personalities complimented and gelled together." — Shari Templeton

"I enjoyed the free food and the clean laundry." — Doreen DeSmit

RIGHT: Barb Martin finds that she has an open shot. Experience, or lack of it was the weak point for the Trojanes in 1981.

BELOW, 1ST ROW L-R: Teresa Todd, Kiki Sekimachi, Deanna Golland, Shari Templeton, Dena Strassbaugh, Elaine Weber. TOP ROW L-R: Coach Jones, Cheryl Hochstettler, Diane Kammerdiener, Dori DeSmit, Kathy Duffey, Lori Shepard, Michelle Norris, Barb Martin, Vicki Pierce, Laura Jones, Char Kumpf, Sue LeMaster, Mgr.

LEFT: Coach Jones gives some advice to Kathy Duffey during a break in the action. Coaching can be a frustrating job when players have little or no experience, but seeing them improve and learn can also be rewarding.

MIDDLE: Field Hockey is a scrappy game, where aggressiveness is a necessity.

BOTTOM: The Taylor team did exhibit steady improvement throughout the season, showing the dividends of their hard work and concentration.

Cross Country Team Takes HBCC Crown

"This Cross Country team was an outstanding group, especially the upperclassmen, and it has been great working with these men over the past 3-4 years. My job is a joy rather than work with this type of young men to relate with. It is also a real challenge to defend what you've done before, namely, win the HBCC Conference Championships." — Coach George Glass

"The season started out good, but later on we slacked off. I don't know why. But we did good in Districts and the Nationals. Overall, we were pretty happy with the whole thing. There was a lot of team unity. We felt like runners and it showed. We had high morals and were a pretty close group." — Walter Bliss

Sample Ends Five Year Term

"We wanted to win very much, but that's not the only way to success. I think one day the scores will be forgotten, but what we have gained from one another won't. The successes shared, experiences gained, relationships developed, and the fellowship we were able to share is much more lasting than the scoreboard. In my opinion, we had a successful season in more than just scores. I would rather have coached here at Taylor the past five years than have been Head Coach of the Green Bay Packers. I am grateful to Taylor and the way these young men have touched my life." — Coach Sam Sample

One of Rollin Ford's major frustrations as quarterback in 1981 was his lack of protection in passing situations. Even with a knee injury, however, he developed into a fine scrambler.

Volleyball Team Takes NAIA Championship

"Overall, the season was good. We definitely had our ups and downs, but we probably played our best game against St. Joseph College at the end of the season. We didn't play above our heads, but with our ability. That game, more than any other, gave us good mindset for state competition. It's exciting even now to remember how the season began and to recall how it progressed. It was marked with times of frustration and discouragement, yet laced with many opportunities of personal and athletic growth. State competition was the culmination of a great deal of work and dedication; a real pleasant memory and exemplary of total team effort." — Coach Sue Herbster

BELOW: Brenda Hillman tries to slam one over some eager defenders as Heidi Ison waits in the wings.

ABOVE: Melody Rohrer has one rejected. Volleyball is a combination of leaping ability, strength, eye-hand coordination, and quickness; yet all of this is useless without a fine sense of teamwork.

"Many games were thrilling, but after we won the NAIA State Championship, I was very excited because it was the first time I had ever experienced any type of state championship. We faced many tough opponents, but two of the toughest were St. Joseph and Indiana Central; both had well-developed programs." — Heidi Ison

Wrestlers Capture HBCC Crown Again

"When I consider the season in light of the very tough schedule we had this year, I am happy with the way things turned out. We really did wrestle against tough teams, but this paid off at the Conference championship. We were basically in the middle of a rebuilding program, and I am very much looking forward to next year."

— Coach Dana Sorenson

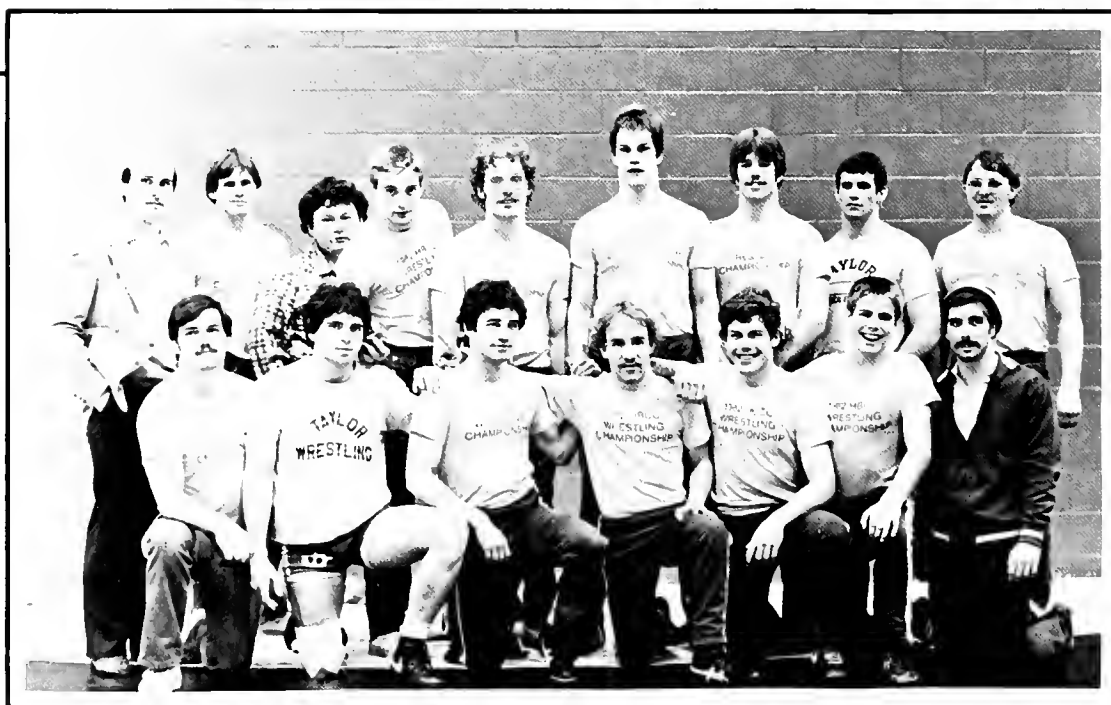

"I think that I value the fellowship we had on the team with the other guys the most. We had good coaching and a great atmosphere. I also liked the fact that we got to stay in the Hilton Hotel this year instead of the dumps we normally spend our time at." — Dwaine Speer

BELOW: Mark Rabine struggles for a takedown. Wrestling is a combination of brute strength, endurance, stamina, knowledge of moves and opponents, and pure courage.

Woman's Basketball Does Well Despite Inexperience

"I would describe this as a young team, but a positive one, without doubt. They came into the season without very much experience, but they had lots of ability, great attitudes, and excellent discipline. We played an extremely tough schedule, playing against mostly Division II schools, yet we had a good year all around. I'm looking forward to next year." — Coach Sue Herbster

Men's Track takes Second in HBCC

"This year's Conference theme was 'key.' As a team we realized the importance of each man being the 'key' to our victory. The biggest 'key' was Coach Glass and the importance he played in our lives. Our team grew tough and close as we competed and took 2nd in our Conference." — Robert Engel

TOP RIGHT: Tim Pettigrew tosses the javelin, an event he usually did not compete in. MIDDLE RIGHT: Kelly Holt crosses the bar in the high jump event, a combination of speed and leaping ability. LOWER RIGHT: So much of track and field is concentration, for unlike many other team sports, each man is on his own, without the support of team members.

"I was very pleased with the way the men performed at the Conference meet. We finished better than anyone expected us to and really competed well. I guess the pluses were we kept improving, and towards the end of the season our competing became a total team effort." — Coach George Glass.

"'PEAK' — Personal effort at Conference. That was the goal of each Taylor athlete this year which was evidenced by our 2nd place finish at the HBCC meet." — Jeff Perrine

Women's Track Team Has Banner Year

"I can only take the time to praise the Lord for allowing us to be so competitive and successful. In the fall, I began praying about the track season. I knew if we were to be successful, we would need God's help. The Lord brought into our program the most dedicated, talented girls Taylor has ever had on a track team. They broke records almost every meet. In the meets we came in 1st place, we were ahead by at least 15 points, and usually 40 or more. The Taylor Women's Track team was tough throughout the year, and we hope to be even tougher next year. We are dedicated to Christ and are learning to enjoy, through struggles, running and the participation in field events." — Coach Ruth Warner

RIGHT: Kay Ingle breaks away from the blocks in a relay event. The women's team was strong in all areas in the spring of 1982.

LOWER RIGHT: Bonnie Brown tosses the javelin, helping to round out the strong field events aspect of the Taylor team.

LEFT: Beth Hunter, who broke the team record in the 1500 meter event, strains to keep up the pace. She was one of the team's steadiest performers.

BELOW: Lori Shepherd, an excellent all-around performer for Taylor, clears the high jump bar.

ABOVE: Dena Strasbaugh hands off to Kathy Duffy in a relay event.

"This was a growing year for the team. There were many new people, but it was the friendliest and most loving team I have been on. Everyone grew, and it was rewarding both trackwise and socially." — Lori Shepherd

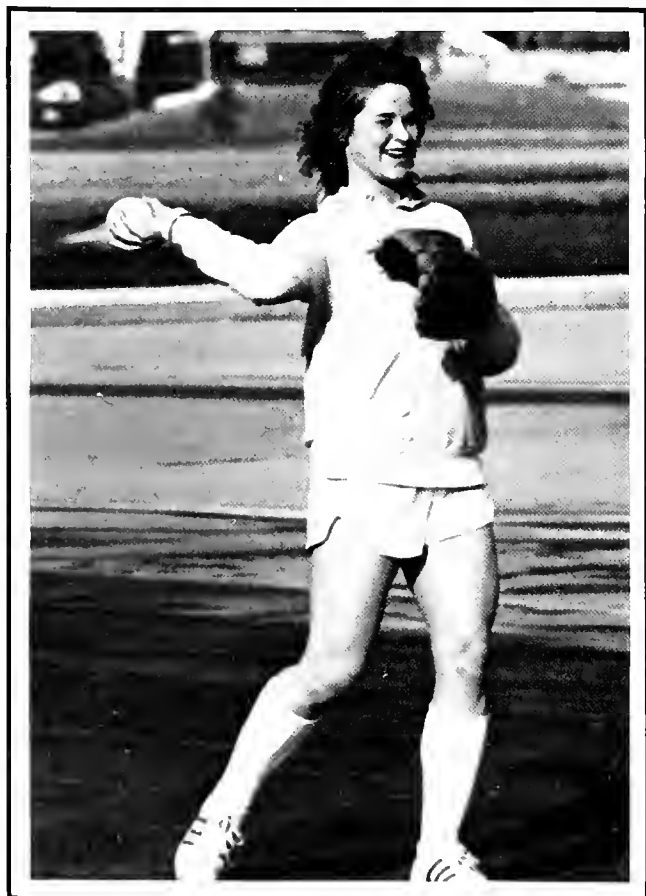

"It was a lot of work, but it paid off because we were undefeated in our dual and tri-meets and broke a lot of records — excellent coaching!" — Kathy Duffy

Softball Team Finishes With 13-8 Record

"My general overall feeling about the season is a good one. We had a slump at the beginning of the season, but came out of it to finish strong. We are blessed with some very talented athletes who are striving to glorify God in their play, as well as perfect their own abilities and skills. It was a pleasure for me to be involved in their lives personally and athletically." — Coach Diana Jones

ABOVE RIGHT: Kathy Cassetty awaits a pitch. Softball requires good hand/eye coordination to be able to determine whether the pitch is a good one, and then to hit the ball where it will not be caught.

LEFT: Elaine Weber finds that good times can be found on the bench as well as in the field. Perhaps that is the most important part of team sports — the friendships that are fostered and developed.

"The year went really fast because it was so exciting. I can't wait to play again next year with the rookies and the veterans." — Tammy Buttermore

BELOW LEFT: Cyndy Harper reacts to a hit while playing shortstop for Taylor. Quick reactions are a must for infielders in the game of softball.

Baseball Team Gains Berth in Playoffs

"The team continued its steady progress toward becoming a perennial winning program and an NAIA District 21 contender. Certainly the major accomplishment of the season was earning a berth in the NAIA tourney. We also finished with an HBCC record of 8-8, which marked the best conference record in the past five years. Despite a less than impressive won-lost record, this Taylor team was the strongest of the last three years. Even though our total goals for the season were not reached, making the Pre-tourney was a first step up for us." — Coach Larry Winterholter

"I think the future looks good for the team. Many quality individuals are coming up, and if they get their heads on straight, they should be a really good team." — Greg Holloway

FIRST ROW L-R: Randy Rutzen, Matt Moses, Steve Neideck, Greg Holloway, Adley Harms, Tim Able, Jeff Dusek, Jan Perry mger. 2ND ROW L-R: Jay Hoffman, Dave Nonnemacher, Dan Edwards, Gary Wixtrom, Rob Vosler, Larry Walker, Ron Johnson. 3RD ROW L-R: Larry Winterholter, Bob Benson, Jim Etherington, Mark Wright, Tom Dages, Steve Hewitt, Andy Eliot, Clark Hewitt, Don Mettica, Eric Valutis, mger.

LEFT: Pitcher Larry Walker practices his form which allowed him to lead the HBCC with a sparkling 9-2 record, as only a sophomore.

BOTTOM: Jeff Dusek pounds out another hit for the Trojans, a team with three .300 hitters — Clark Hewitt, Steve Hewitt, and Andy Elliot

LEFT: Mark Benson sizes up the situation.

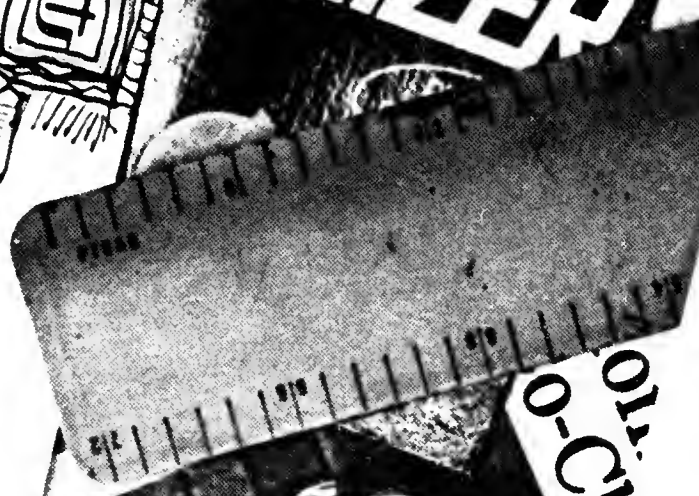

"I would say the word that summarizes this year's golf team would be 'fun'. We were quite young, but gave it our best try. We would all like to thank Coach Romine for a great season. We finished fourth in Conference, graduated one senior, Bob Neideck, and all-Conference honors went to Terry Allen."

— Ken Meyer

I guess a good thing about Taylor's size is that Joe Average needn't feel intimidated. There are opportunities for everyone to get involved with, regardless of your I.Q. or your time in the 40 yard dash.

But, it's also possible to get caught in too many things, and quality can suffer then. It seems to me that it's better to do a good, high-quality job in one area than it is to do a shoddy job in 2 or 3 areas. People often need to be able to limit themselves.

it's certainly possible, and probably easy for many students to go to college for four years, and never get involved in any extra-curricular activities. that's a shame. when the only thing that someone does at school is study the books, life becomes very dull. they are exposed to a limited number of people, a limited number of ideas, and a limited number of lifestyles. so what happens? life becomes limited. getting involved in plays, government, clubs, sports, etc., is a way to broaden horizons, as well as have a lot of fun. do it.

looking to that date for years and years. Some look at it as a loss of friends, security, and stability. Others see it as a turning point, where they are finally set free from the rigid structure of 17+ years of formal education.

It makes you think, though, and ask questions like "Did I really get as much out of college as I could have?" "Could I have learned more if I'd spent a bit more time studying?" Oh well, it's all behind us now.
I do know that 4 years of college has completely changed me as a person. I'm glad
I decided to go to college.

Taylor University • Upland, Indiana 46989 • (317) 998-2751, ext. 4

everybody probably thinks it must be great, but being a senior can be rough. for one thing, hardly anyone knows what they'll be doing next year. that's scary. seniors are also older than the rest of the classes, and that can cause conflicts, too. what freshmen are interested in doing and talking about often bores the hack out of seniors, and vice versa. so, there's almost a paradox present in the life of a senior -- he or she is frightened about what the future holds, yet it is time to be moving on and getting out of this place. unless you happen to be on the five-year plan.

"It would surely be the ease of fellowship — the openness of growth and Lord-centered lives and the reality through example shared with me by once Baby-Christians growing as they grasped and cried with Christ."

November 6, 1981 — Inauguration Day

ABOVE: Dr. Gregg O. Lehman gives the Presidential Response during the Inaugural ceremonies. He became Taylor University's twenty-seventh president.

"Taylor's past is mixed with notable successes and near disastrous failures. While there is often the temptation to merely examine the positive aspects of our history, we must realize that the successes often are the results of lessons learned from the 'hard knocks' of the past. Ignoring history, particularly the lessons learned from mistakes, dooms us to repeating it. Few things are more disastrous than being locked into the NOW. 'Where it's at' is appropriate for the news media. But where it's at today is not where it was yesterday, or will be tomorrow." — President Gregg O. Lehman

A New Era

"Easy times may permit the luxury of complacency, but hard times demand, and have a way of producing, heroism. I am convinced we have the resources, the faith, the character to be as sacrificial, as resolute, as faithful as necessary to accomplish the essential and even the seemingly impossible, in the decade ahead." — President Gregg O. Lehman

BELOW: Dr. Alan Winkist, along with the other members of Taylor's faculty, attended the ceremony.

BELOW: Chris Peterson, going through his daily ritual of getting ready for classes. The guy must go through a lot of cotton every year, but if it makes you look good, it's worth it.

BELOW: Dave Walker works at the Wengatz desk, keeping life in the lobby under control. The desk workers in the women's dorms are lifesavers for those who come in during late hours when the doors are locked. After 3:00 A.M., however, one must call Security. Guys are different — if they get locked out, they just rip the door off of the hinges.

RIGHT: Douglas Curt "Casper Weinberger" Crew readies himself for any surprise attacks in the middle of the night.

BELOW RIGHT: Cindy Kelley looks very excited about one of the favorite campus activities — waiting in line. Here, it is at the DC, but it could be at the records office, the grill, the library, or many other places.

i think it's time
to just be.
to stop. simply stop.
stop it all.
the fighting.
the striving.
and the wanting to
measure up always.
yes, maybe it is time
to just be.

if God is a God of grace,
He will accept me.
and if you are my friend,
you too will accept me
and let me just be.
You will not tell me
to do or to be anything.

in just sitting back,
in just letting go,
and in just being,
perhaps i can discover
who i am
and why i am
the way i am

i don't have to do anything to be.
i already am. — JoAnn Brandner

RIGHT: Tim Miller gets funky on the guitar. Music is a part of the lives of most Taylor people, in one form or another, whether listening to a stereo or playing the violin.

BELOW: Pamela Gu after having her brain fried in a tough class. College requires a lot of heavy thinking, and there are times when it would be nice to leave it all behind, but learning is also a very fascinating process. What we gain by gathering knowledge cannot be measured by points or dollars or yards.

BELOW: Dave Slaughter shows that it is possible, and actually quite common, for a college student to act as if he were still in junior high.

Lord —

What a blessed time of peace and calm.
Early morning, stormy, wet, and cold.
In the warm quietness of my room,
I want to fellowship with you.

I feel You here.

The gentle, but overwhelming power of Your love.

Let it stay strong in me,
may I be ruled by it,
may I live by it, and
may I love by it.

Let it carry me as long as I am alive.
Grant this, Wonderful Counselor,
to my soul and all believing souls.

Teach me Your love today and give me
hope for forever.

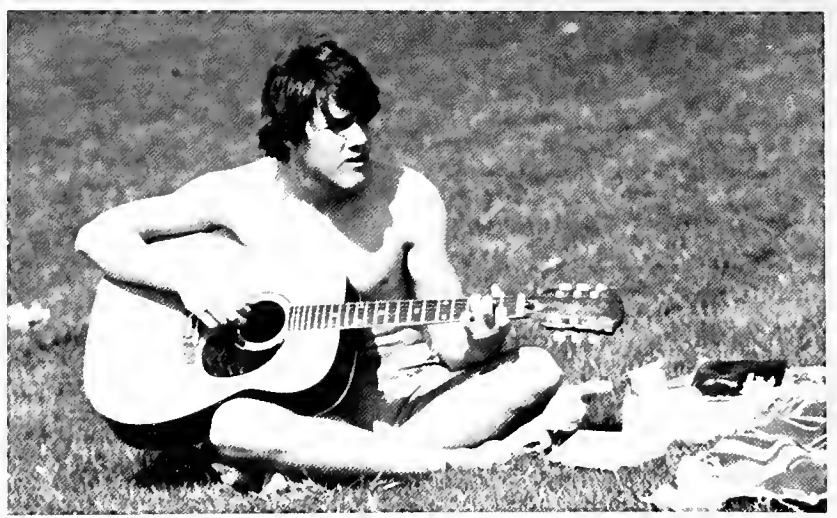

Never let me be consumed by fear,
doubt or gloom.

I shall live forever in victory
because there is no defeat or destruction
that can remove me from the protection of the wings of my Father's life and light.

TOP RIGHT: Classes are over for the afternoon, there are no more exams this week, it is time to sit down and relax. An advantage of a rural campus is all the open space for student's use.

MIDDLE RIGHT: But then there are those tests to look forward to. It is sometimes frightening to think that a whole semester's worth of studying can come down to one two hour exam.

BOTTOM RIGHT: After classes are out, however, there is always time to take part in one's favorite form of recreation.

TOP LEFT: Julie Sprunger takes in the sun on a Saturday late in the Spring. What would life be without Saturdays? It is hard to imagine what it must have been like for factory workers in the 19th century, working six days a week all year long. We really have it very easy.

MIDDLE LEFT: Paul Branks and Mark Olson practice modeling for GQ magazine. Or perhaps they are upset concerning the condition of their Fairlane apartment. The off-campus complex was referred to as "The Slums" by some.

BELOW: Taylor has always had several "Campus Dogs," that are friends with all the students, joining us in the classroom, Dinings Commons, and the dorms. They seem to make Taylor a little more like home.

BELOW RIGHT: Amy Burdick and Betsy Burns, both of whom are French majors, seem fairly amused about something. Betsy, like several other French majors at Taylor, spent time studying in France, learning the language through firsthand experience. She later used this knowledge in a summer mission program in Africa. BOTTOM: Tom McKnight takes advantage of the sun to study for finals.

LEFT: So, did you ever wonder what the President of the student body always did in that plush office of his? Now you know, as you see Scott Cox boogying on his desk.

MIDDLE BELOW: For the first time in several years, the famed Trojan Horse changed hands. Swallow Robin had held it for a long time, but floors from Morris undertook daring expeditions to capture the prized possession. Here, the boys from Third Mo show off the object of harrowing adventures.

BOTTOM: Kitty Lehman, Georgia Reasner, Jill Meckley, and Vicki Cruse, known as part of the "Bandana People Group," relax by the lake during a cookout.

BELOW: Linda Britton holds the drink favored by Taylor females nine to one over those drinks that contain sugar, and thus, those terrible things called calories.

CLOCKWISE FROM UPPER RIGHT: Mark Burkholder and David Shipley show how nice it can be having a good friend; Loretta Lantz reads THE ECHO, catching up on all the campus news — in 1982, the newspaper explored such topics as the Equal Rights Amendment, Suicide, and Homosexuality; Sue Vinton and Holly Egner display the results of their new P.E. class, Bubble Blowing 101.

After the Storm

Like a sailboat in waveless water, gliding gently through the blue,
we are resting without worry
as the old becomes the new.

As the wind sets afresh on the sails,
and the boat on the waves softly rides,
we too regain our strength,
as the renewing peace abides.

Now with the crew restored and ready,
to continue the voyage long,
enabled are we to resume,
the life where we belong.

— JoAnn Brandner and David McClow

BELOW: Sue Wright and Bruce Brown, getting a little frustrated with their computer program. Systems majors spend many hours in front of terminals like this one, and often times, it becomes a battle of Man against the Machine.

BELOW: Glenda Lehman takes offense to the remark made that perhaps she should not have cut 24 straight Bib. Lit. classes. Well, it WAS at 8:00 A.M.

BELOW: This guy has been watching TV a little bit TOO long. Not only that, but he has not been taking very good care of his teeth. By the look on his face, however, it doesn't seem to matter, for he seems to be pretty happy.

BELOW: Mike Burchfield shows signs of anorexia. Perhaps if he would eat more than one meal a week, things would be different.

RIGHT: Janet Ryker, Editor of the campus newspaper, The Echo, performs some of the endless phone work involved with the media. Many student leaders have jobs which require almost as much time and dedication as a full-time job would. Of course, their grades often show what such a time commitment results in.

BELOW: This student was caught trying to take more than one dessert at the Dining Commons. Obviously, such behavior is against the rules.

The past is behind.
We were made to be seekers of
what is to come.
We must put away
that which we no
longer are able to claim.
For to cling to a memory is like trying to hold the sunshine
in your hands and the wind in your arms.

— Leslie Cruz

RIGHT: Andy Borgstrom wonders how he will ever get that paper for Wally Roth done on time. Andy, like most Systems and Computer majors, could look forward to a wide-open job market even at a time of high unemployment rates. The future for those taking a degree in the humanities or social sciences was very different, however.

LEFT: Sue Vinton seems to have control over Dr. Squires here in an interesting role reversal. One ideal of Taylor is that it should be a place where students and faculty can relate both in and out of the classroom.

BELOW: Phyllis "Cheese" Roden studies diligently, a feat which is hard to accomplish when one is a senior. Most seniors have been in school for at least seventeen years, and school just gets to be a bit tedious after a while.

BELOW LEFT: Ric Anderson takes his customary place in the Dining Commons, the place to be if you're looking for food, fun, or fellowship.

 Zurcher, Melanie 79

One of the goals of this book was to present the people of Taylor University as individuals. Too often, we find it easy to conform to the norm established by the masses — we lose the privilege we all should have of thinking for ourselves, of choosing our own destinies, of forming our own dreams. But if we hold fast to the ideals of individuality and diversity, we will find that our world becomes a more interesting and exciting place to live in, and we may find that we become stimulated to initiate a search within ourselves that produces challenges and successes we did not even know existed.

Let us never condemn the different man. Let us never look down upon a fellow human who chooses to live a life which does not fit the pattern established by our own. Instead, let us look for qualities in that man which we can respect and admire. The different man's life is unlike our's for a reason; let us find what the cause for this diversity is, and then learn from it. We need not agree with a person's beliefs or lifestyle, but by at least reaching an understanding of it, we can know more about ourselves. Much better this than the wasted time and energy spent belittling another person.

Using direct quotations from people in the Taylor community is a good way to show the individualism and diversity which does exist here. When asked a question, one must do at least SOME independent thinking in order to respond intelligently. Some still find it difficult to respond intelligently, but that is another matter. Quotations show the essence of people's characters. Rather than going through the channels of thought, interpretation, and being written down, a response in the form of a quotation is direct and revealing. Sometimes such a process may expose corners of our minds we would normally keep concealed, but this is okay, for it presents us in a form closer to our true selves than a guarded response would.

On the lighter side, there are a few things about Taylor of which I have always wondered. For instance, if Taylor is a University, where is the graduate school? It is not that I am interested in applying to it or anything like that, but it is kind of embarrassing to try and explain to outsiders the concept of a university within a college. And what about those publicity shots of the Taylor campus we always see in magazines and catalogues, etc? I mean, every one of those photos shows trees sprouting up every three feet with beautiful blossoms on the branches and a handsome couple strolling hand-in-hand beneath it. Where do they get those pictures, and who are they trying to fool? I think they should put in a more accurate photo depicting the miles of barren fields, and have a pigeon-toed big rear-ended loaf like myself tromping through them with mud all over my Levis. But then, that is only my opinion. And what about 8:15 P.M. — affectionately known as Taylor Time; where did that come from, anyway? I mean, what kind of person would think up such an hour? Oh well, at least it makes us unique.

And is not that the whole point? If we have been created in God's image, then I would hope we are all unique and diverse beings, always striving for truth in our OWN ways. Long live the differences found in mankind!
